Roosevelt's Budget Need May Prevent Gold Juggling

Thomas Holds Out For Compromise

Changing Dollar Policy Seen as Obstacle to Bond Issue.

By Elliott Thurston.

President Roosevelt's budget requirements of $10,000,000,000 in the next six months may precipitate an early decision on monetary policy.

Several leaders in Congress proposed yesterday that the White House summon a conference to reconcile the conflicting viewpoints on monetary policy. Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, believing that the extremists on both sides of the monetary issue are closer together than they realize, said he would urge the President to call in the spokesmen for both sides in an effort to find common ground. He is confident that both sides, so-called conservatives and inflationists alike, agree that uncertainty about the dollar should be removed at once.

He sees a possible compromise on a 50 per cent cut in the gold content of the dollar, yielding the Treasury a $3,600,000,000 "profit" on reserve bank gold alone, and, if necessary to finance the budget, recourse to direct sale of Treasury notes to reserve banks, or to "greenbacks." The Thomas amendment authorizes direct sale of as much as $3,000,000,000 of notes, or else an issue of a maximum of $3,000,000,000 of "United States notes."

Opinions on Plan Vary.

Whether recourse to Treasury impounding of the "profit" on reserve bank gold, to direct sale of notes, or to greenbacks will be necessary depends upon whether the Treasury is able to raise the $10,000,000,000, required in the next six months, by the usual methods of selling bonds to the public.

Opinions differ. Thomas contends that the Treasury will have to finance itself by resort to the powers in the amendment bearing his name. He thinks the public, uneasy over the dollar, will refuse to buy $10,000,000,000 more in bonds or that the interest would be prohibitive.

Senator Borah agrees that the President should summon the dissenting groups to seek common ground. He, too, holds that it is time to remove the uncertainty. The so-called conservatives have urged all along a removal of the uncertainty, and James P. Warburg, erstwhile adviser to the President, was willing, as were some others of the "orthodox" school, to pay al-

Workman Drowns In Fall From Span

Foot Slips, Plunging Him Into River Below.

Falling 15 feet from his perch on a span of the new bridge under construction over the Eastern Branch of the Anacostia River, at Twenty-eighth street northeast, Sam V. French, 33, iron worker, of Philadelphia, was drowned late yesterday.

Fellow workers said French, whose temporary address in Washington was 1316 Kenilworth avenue northeast, lost his balance when a bolt he was adjusting slipped. They called the fire rescue squad, who aided harbor officers in recovering the body.

French was employed by the Structural Steel Co., of Philadelphia. His body was taken to Casualty Hospital, and later to the District Morgue. Acting Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald was notified.

Farm State Chiefs Called to Meeting

Governors Will Study Relief Plans.

St. Paul, Jan. 4 (AP).—Gov. Floyd B. Olson today said Gov. William Murray, of Oklahoma, had authorized him to issue an official call for a conference of governors of agricultural States, to outline legislative recommendations to Congress.

The Oklahoma governor suggested January 15-17 as tentative dates for the gathering and informed Gov. Olson, chief executives of Arkansas, Kansas, New Mexico, Arizona and Nevada already had accepted invitations.

American Dies in France.

St. Tropez, France, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—A man found dead in a hotel here yesterday was identified today as James Mackenson, 40, of Philadelphia, Pa. He managed an American night club at St. Tropez for several months. Death was attributed to natural causes.

129 Sealed Up to Die In Flame-Swept Mine

Inferno Balks Rescue After 22 Other Dead Are Recovered, So Czechoslovakian Pit Is Shut Up to Halt Spread of Fire.

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—The pit of the Nelson 3d mine at Ossegg, 50 miles northwest of here, was sealed tonight with 129 miners still entombed in its gas-filled galleries—one of the worst mine disasters in recent history.

Twenty-two bodies were recovered before fire broke out all along the galleries, following the original explosion far below the surface. The fire and gas made rescue work impossible and hope for the men entombed finally was abandoned to prevent further casualties.

The officials declared that sealing of the mine with 129 men still entombed in it was necessary on account of the enormous fires raging below, endangering all adjacent pits in the Ossegg Mines.

Six of the bodies were recovered tonight before the pit was sealed, three barely recognizable. The others recovered yesterday were charred. This brings the total dead to 151 miners.

Experts said it would be a month before the death pit could be penetrated again.

The government named a state investigating commission. Garl Juzl, chief of the mining department in the Breux District, where the tragedy occurred, was dismissed for failure to appear on the scene yesterday, sending a representative instead.

143 Gangsters Jailed in N. Y. Crime Drive

Police Comb All Hangouts Under Stern Orders From LaGuardia.

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—One hundred and forty-three gangsters paraded into police headquarters today—herded together in a quiet all-night drive as Commissioner John F. O'Ryan's administration began to function.

Under the glaring lights of the famous police line-up, 64 of them passed, the first group taken as the police responded to their new leader's demand to "clean up or get out."

The city was excited, the underworld worried, as the news of the drive spread, but Commissioner O'Ryan, wartime commander of the Twenty-seventh Division, regarded it as routine.

"It just shows the men are on the job," said the commissioner, who has announced the department will not relax until known criminals are behind bars or driven out of the city.

Biggest Since Whalen.

It was the biggest police drive since the regime of Commissioner Grover A. Whalen, but it lacked the Whalen touch. He always announced his drives in advance.

The drive started before midnight and lasted until dawn as police answered the promise by O'Ryan and Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia that there would be no political interference in police matters.

"Yes, we stepped out, all right," one detective explained. "It's just what we want. We don't mind going out after them if we're sure we'll be backed up."

"Mayor LaGuardia means what he says," said another. "We know now that we won't lose our jobs if we pick up the wrong guy."

All Hideouts Searched.

Into the speakeasies — which O'Ryan has promised to eliminate when licensing is completed—cafes, night clubs and known gang hangouts the police went to make arrests for offenses ranging from extortion to narcotic addiction.

Police headquarters, normally quiet in the early morning, was jammed. There were insufficient cells. Officers had to go to restaurants to get sandwiches and coffee for the prisoners.

Federal Inspector Halts Ocean Flight

Propellor Vibrates Too Much, Official Says.

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—Last-minute orders from the Department of Commerce today grounded Capt. George R. Pond and Lieut. Casare Sabell as they were warming up their airplane to take off from Floyd Bennett Field on a projected nonstop flight to Rome.

S. L. Willetts, supervising inspector, informed the fliers their propellor was not acceptable. All planes equipped with propellors of the type must be grounded, for vibrations have developed in them, Willets said.

Spanish Congressmen Riot in Party Dispute

The riot broke out when members of the Nationalist party failed to join in what was intended to be a solemn tribute to the memory of Francisco Macia, the late president of Catalonia.

3 Children and Woman Die in Virginia Fires

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 4 (AP).—Four lives were taken by fire in Roanoke and Salem during the night.

Three Negro children died in flames that destroyed a three-room shack in Salem about 11 o'clock, while a white woman died in Roanoke Hospital this morning of burns suffered when her clothing caught fire in the police detention room at the municipal building.

French Bank Fraud Query Gets Impetus

Premier Takes Charge of Inquiry While Police Hunt Director.

Paris, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Premiere Camille Chautemps took charge tonight of the government's investigation into the collapse of the Credit Municipal Bank of Bayonne, involving hundreds of millions of francs in fake bond issues and lost security, most of it jewels.

The premier conferred with officials on means of apprehending Alexander Stavisky, missing director. The bank was a private institution which also functioned as a pawnbroker's establishment.

Police Raid Offices.

Meanwhile, secret police raided one of the numerous offices operated in Paris by Stavisky, as new revelations indicated the scandal would have international reverberations.

Police over the country were mobilized to hunt Stavisky, dubbed a "second Kreuger," as his crash recalled the collapse of the world-wide Kreuger Swedish match empire.

The press joined government oppositionists in bitter criticism of the Chautemps administration. Officials were busy denying charges of laxity, and worse.

Raiders Seize Documents.

The Credit Municipal of Bayonne closed when it became known that an issue of 500,000,000 francs ($31,050,000) in bonds had proved worthless. Inquiry showed Stavisky had disappeared and most of the jewelry held by the bank in security for loans on pawn also was missing.

The police raiders announced seizure of "very interesting documents" in the local offices of the closed Bayonne Bank. However, a search of Stavisky's suite in the Hotel Champs Elysee was fruitless.

'I Hope It's Twins,' Dempsey Grins, Waiting an Heir

Salt Lake City, Jan. 4 (AP).—Jack Dempsey, former world's heavyweight boxing champion, said tonight he and Mrs. Dempsey, the former Hannah Williams, of Broadway, are expecting an heir.

Dempsey, grinning around a cigar while his train stopped here en route to New York, said he and his wife are "very happy."

"I always wanted one," he said. "Hannah is pleased as well as myself. We hope it will be twins."

"Both boys, Jack?" Dempsey was asked.

"We'll be glad, anyway," he replied.

Mrs. Dempsey, a smiling witness to her husband's statements, declined to be quoted. She is Dempsey's third wife.

Lumberjack Crucifies Man for False Prayer

Berchtesgaden, Germany, Jan. 4 (AP).—A lumberjack named Wroblewski was accused by police today of killing a companion who, Wroblewski thought, did not say his prayers properly.

Both men were said to have knelt before going to bed, when Wroblewski claimed his comrade recited the prayers falsely and, according to the police version, slew him with a hammer and nailed the victim's hands and feet to the floor.

American Homes Need Non-Slip Bathtub

Chicago, Jan. 4 (AP).—What the American home of today needs more than anything else is a non-slip bathtub, Frederick J. Kiesler, furniture designer, told buyers attending the National Furniture Show.

"It is a matter of life insurance statistics that 35 per cent of all accidents in the home occur in the bathtub," he said.

D. C. Allotted 36 Millions; Schools Gain

Increase of $2,747,679 Largely Due to 5% Salary Return.

Education's Amount of $9,504,106 Nearly Million More.

A District budget for 1935 totaling $35,821,013.94, of which $2,430,000 represented permanent and $33,391,013.94 annual appropriations, was transmitted to Congress by the President yesterday.

The budget provides for a Federal contribution of $5,700,000 from the Federal Treasury toward maintenance and development of the National Capital. This is the amount contributed for the current year.

The total of the annual and permanent appropriations together was $2,747,679.94 more than was carried in the current appropriation act, according to comparisons transmitted by the Buerau of the Budget. The annual appropriations only were greater by $3,015,179.94 than appropriated for this year, the bureau's comparison showed.

Increase Lies in Salaries.

The comparison, however, was based solely on the amounts specified in the current appropriation act at the time of its enactment and did not take into consideration additional sums which have or will be expended before the end of the year.

Most of the actual total increase was due to the addition of $1,167,687 for District salaries in line with the recommendation that one-third of the 15 per cent cut in pay be restored next year.

Estimates for the public school system comprised the largest item, totaling $9,504,106. This was $963,393 more than the $8,540,713 appropriated this year. Only $568,000 was provided for school construction as follows: Ten rooms and gymnasium addition to the Browne Junior High School, $168,000; continuing construction of the Woodrow Wilson High School, $400,000.

No appropriation was provided for completing the Anacostia School, although Congress authorized its construction and appropriated an initial $125,000 this year. Construction of the school has been indefinitely postponed by the Commissioners because the Budget Bureau refused to approve the $125,000 requested for its completion next year. Use of an unexpended balance of $36,000, remaining out of an appropriation last year, was authorized for construction of a gymnasium at the Powell Junior High School.

Welfare Second Largest.

Public welfare items comprised the second largest total, amounting to $6,476,476, an increase of $631,181 over the $5,845,295 carried for the current year. This total provided for operation of the jail, workhouse, reformatory, Gallinger Hospital, the National Training Schools for Boys

Peruvian Indians Kill 5 in Attack

Indian Village Is Razed in Smelter Protest.

Lima, Peru, Jan. 4 (AP).—Official reports received today said 500 inhabitants of San Matero, an Andean village, had attacked and destroyed the village of Tamboraque Tuesday and that five had been killed and 12 injured in the battle.

Both men and women joined in the attack as a protest against fumes arising from a Tamboraque smelting plant, which they claimed had caused the death of a San Mateoan.

Peruvian troops were used to repulse the invaders.

"Hunch" Right; He's Killed.

Miami, Jan. 4 (AP).—A "hunch" following a narrow escape from injury by an automobile less than a month ago caused Charles T. Roberts, 61, to prepare his will. Last night he died of injuries suffered when he was struck by an automobile.

Roosevelt Reports 7-Billion Deficit, 31-Billion Debt; Restores 5% of Pay July 1

President Asserts Living Costs Don't Require Further Return.

Immediate Relief Is Under Study

Plan Meets Opposition; Would Drop Ban on Army Promotions.

Restoration of one-third of the 15 per cent cut in salaries of civilian Government employes in the next fiscal year, beginning July 1, was recommended to Congress by President Roosevelt in his budget message yesterday.

Continuation of the restrictive and curtailing provisions of the economy act also was recommended for the civilian workers, but operation of the prohibition against automatic promotions for the Army, Navy and Marine Corps should be abandoned, the Chief Executive said.

No word was forthcoming from the White House concerning possible restoration of a small portion of the salary slash at once by the President, on the basis of a living costs report compiled by the Labor Department. A decision probably will be announced shortly.

"It is eminently fair that, the cost of living having fallen as compared with 1928, the employes of the Government sustain some reduction in compensation," the President said in his message.

Not Inconsistent, He Says.

"This is not inconsistent with our policy of advocating an increase in wages in industry. For wages there had fallen far beyond any reduction contemplated for Federal employes, and in most grades are even now substantially below compensation paid Federal employes under the maximum reduction of 15 per cent."

The budgetary pronouncement of the President came at a time when sentiment was rapidly growing in Congress for restoration of the Government salaries to statutory levels.

What effect the President's recommendation of a 5 per cent restoration will have was doubtful. Speaker Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, said there was a large number, if not a majority, of the members of the House in favor of letting Government salaries go back to statutory levels next year.

Byrns Favors All Back.

Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, Democratic leader, also reported wide sentiment in favor of restoration and declared himself in favor.

Representative Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, Republican leader, was blunt in his criticism of the salary recommendations. He favored restoration of full pay, he said.

"When the Administration is pouring out money for big salaries to emergency enterprises I see no reason why Congress should cut the salaries of honest employes, who have spent the better part of their lives working for small pay," Representative Snell said. "I am going to vote for full return of the 15 per cent. The excuse was given that cuts were necessary to balance the budget, that excuse doesn't exist now."

Some Discouraged.

Some of the members who favored restoration seemed loath to take public issue with the President. Undoubtedly his message strengthened the hands of those opposed to restoring salaries. Despite it, however, there will be a vigorous fight

PWA Allots $50,000 To Emergency Council

The Public Works Administration yesterday allotted $50,000 to the new National Emergency Council for operating expenses.

The council, headed by Frank Walker, is charged with coordinating recovery efforts throughout the Nation. The public works announcement said the fund was for "administrative expenses."

Tugwell Bill, Less Drastic, Given Senate

Copeland Asserts Broad Changes Don't Weaken Food-Drug Measure.

Riddled with amendments, to meet the objections of reputable manufacturers and advertisers, the Tugwell bill to revise the food and drugs act of 1906, was introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, so changed its own author hardly would recognize it.

The measure retains the consumer protection sought by Prof. Rexford G. Tugwell, but wide powers conferred by the author upon Secretary of Agriculture Wallace have been drastically curbed, and other causes for apprehension voiced at hearings on the Hill early in December have been removed.

Another Bill Given House.

References to "inference and ambiguity" in defining advertising offenses, written into the first draft by Prof. Tugwell to the indignation and vehement protest of publishers, have been eliminated, as have clauses regarding palliative medicines and provisions requiring full formula disclosure.

Committees on public health and food, appointed by the President, will pass upon regulations designed by the Secretary of Agriculture, whose powers, under the original version of the "brain trust" author, were denounced at the hearings as "dictatorial."

At the same time, another food and drugs bill, prepared by the National Drug Trade Conference, was introduced in the House by Representative Loring M. Black (Democrat), New York. This measure follows more closely the lines of the existing act.

Black Fears Confusion.

In a statement accompanying its introduction, Representative Black said that "to repeal teh existing act for an etnirely new measure would result in chaos and confusion, creating new abuses from which the consumer would suffer, as well as industry."

The Tugwell bill, which probably will be known henceforth as the Copeland bill, met with a lively bombardment of objections when it was before a Senate subcommittee a month ago.

Chiefly these were directed against the etxent of authority conferred upon the Secretary of Agriculture, who could have barred

Oil Monopoly Seen In Japanese Move

Tokio, Friday, Jan. 5 (U.P.).—Plans of the ministry of industry and commerce to place the importation of all petroleum and petroleum products under government control was generally interpreted today as the first step in a program to establish a virtual government oil monopoly in Japan.

Japan produces but 10 per cent of the petroleum consumed in the empire. It is said national defense needs are cited in arguments for a government monopoly.

One Dead, One Missing After Blaze in Boston

Boston, Jan. 4 (AP).—One woman was burned to death, a man was missing, and two persons were injured today as fire swept through an apartment building in the South End District.

The woman was identified tentatively as Miss Grace Lawson, 50. Apparently, she had been burned to death while attempting to reach a window.

Silver Blocs Seek Action On 3 Fronts

House Group Organized for Monetization, Free Coinage.

An incipient drive for remonetization of silver, early gathering force in both branches of Congress yesterday broke forth on three fronts:

Organization of a House bloc to promote the free and unlimited coinage of silver and gold.

Introduction in the Senate of a bill by Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, providing such coinage at the historic ratio of 16 to 1 and repealing President Roosevelt's present monetary powers.

A "very satisfactory conference" Senators King and Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, had with the President, who made no commitments.

House Bloc Favors Committee.

Eighteen House members from eight Western silver-producing States, assembling on Capitol Hill, agreed to the appointment of a committee to work for bimetallism with other groups and adopted the same resolution approved several days ago by 26 senators.

Meanwhile, the cause was argued before President Roosevelt by Senators King and Wheeler, who declined to give his reaction but intimated they expected some further action.

While Senator King declared "the President has a fine grasp of the silver problem," and Senator Wheeler reported satisfaction with the interview, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader, later told newspapermen at the White House he did not anticipate any silver legislation this session.

The House 18 members attending, all Democrats, representing Utah, Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico, did not set a fixed ratio, but most of them favor the 16-to-1 relationship. They adopted a plan to sound out other House groups.

The committee for this purpose is headed by John A. Martin, of Colorado, and is composed of Abe Murdock, Utah; Compton I. White, Idaho, and Joseph P. Monaghan, Montana. Mrs. Isabella Greenway, of Arizona, also was invited to serve.

Adoption of the Senate resolution was on the insistence of James G. Scrugham, of Nevada, although more time was favored by William L. Fiesinger, of Ohio, who has introduced a bill providing for the purchase of silver until the 1926 price level is attained.

Sentiment Is Sought.

Realizing opinions on silver are varied, Andrew L. Somers (Democrat), New York, chairman of the House coinage committee, meanwhile invited committee members to meet next week. Then, he said, he intends to inform the President of sentiment and "ask him what he wants."

Senator King's bill, similar in respect to the Wheeler amendment, which the Senate rejected last spring, 43 to 33, would repeal portions of the Thomas amendment giving the President the right to issue "greenbacks."

Thus, if adopted, the United States would return to the gold standard and an end would be put to the current dollar-devaluation experiment. The bill provides for the present grains of silver and gold in the dollar, the same as the Wheeler amendment.

Budget Message Asks Huge New Sums to Finance Recovery.

Will Seek Loans Of $10,000,000,000

How Huge Sums Can Be Spent Perplexes Congressmen.

By Franklin Waltman, Jr.

President Roosevelt's budget message, forecasting a public debt of $31,834,000,000 on June 30, 1935—$5,200,000,000 greater than the peak of the war debt—brought expressions of shock and amazement from Capitol Hill, although the Democratic leaders said the revelation was to be expected in view of past appropriations.

The surprise seemed to be chiefly over the President's contention that the current fiscal year would end on June 30 next with a deficit of $7,309,068,211, exclusive of debt retirements, and that the next fiscal year would end on June 30, 1935, with a deficit of $1,986,133,221, or a total deficit for the two years of $9,295,201,432.

These deficits were predicated on the President's computation that expenditures for the current fiscal year would total $10,569,006,067, and for the 1935 fiscal year $5,960,798,700, or for the two years, $16,529,805,667, excusive of debt retirements in each case. This latter figure is $343,000,000 greater than the total of the National debt on June 30, 1930.

Answer Is Sought.

In gasps of surprise, as House and Senate clerks intoned these figures, members asked each other "where is the money coming from?" The answer was not apparent in the President's message, which proposed no new taxes except increased levies on liquor and a tightening of the income tax laws.

Mr. Roosevelt pointed out, however, that during the next six months the Federal Government would have to borrow $10,000,000,000—$4,000,000,000 to meet maturities of like amount and $6,000,000,000 of new money. He was represented at the White House as confident, in view of improved conditions, that the Government would have no trouble whatever in obtaining this huge sum.

After the first surprise over the budget, Capitol Hill generally asked itself "how can so much money be spent?" This inquiry had reference chiefly to the Presidential contention that when this fiscal year ends expenditures, including debt retirement, will total $11,057,178,467.

Since all expenditures for the first six months of the year totaled only $2,621,870,000, this would mean that in the next six months more than three times that amount would have to be spent. Expressed another way, it means spending

Twin Twisters Hurt Eight at Pensacola

35 Dwellings Also Wrecked by Freak Storm.

Pensacola, Fla., Jan. 4 (AP).—Two tornadoes which first appeared as ruge water spouts in Pensacola Bay swept into the city today, seriously injuring eight persons and wrecking about 35 residences.

One of the injured, 3-year-old Marion Kenneth Rigby, probably will die. Many other persons were treated for minor injuries. More than 100 buildings, including two at the Naval Air Station, were damaged.

The storm that wrecked most damage struck in the vicinity of old Corry Aviation Field, after dipping over the business section without material harm. The other tornado passed along the waterfront. One of the tornadoes passed within three blocks of the main business section.

Arizona Picks Acheson For Bank Tax Lawsuits

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 4 (AP).—Dean G. Acheson, former Undersecretary of the United States Treasury, was appointed today by the Arizona Tax Commission and Attorney General Arthur T. La Prade as special attorney to handle this State's bank tax cases before the United States Supreme Court.

He was a special assistant attorney general for Arizona during the Colorado River fight before the high tribunal.

Debonair, Wealthy Duke Sues His Socialist Niece for Libel

An article she wrote for "the Oxford and Cambridge Magazine" is the center of the controversy but the writ did not mention particulars.

Others named defendants were W. G. A. Wayte, editor of the publication, and its proprietors. They retained Norman Brikett, one of the leading cross-examiners of the English bar. Date of the trial was not set.

Lady Sibell, second daughter of the Earl of Beauchamp, became a convert to Socialism two years ago and has been a regular contributor to various newspapers and magazines.

Prior to her career, she was an employe of Mrs. Fred Cripps at the latter's Bond street hairdressing establishment. Mrs. Cripps was once the Duchess of Westminster, her marriage to the duke being dissolved in 1926 after six years.

The thrice-married duke, who is 54, inherited some of the most valuable properties in London, including 600 acres of land in the heart of the city, and 30,000 acres elsewhere.

It was estimated that 1,000 families in London and 100 cottages in Cheshire, Wales, and Scotland pay him $1,225,000 in rental annually.

He has been described as the most debonair of the dukes and reputedly allowed two former wives $50,000 annually.

$600,000 Mall Plan Approved By Lawmakers

One More Step Remains to Assure Development of Beauty Spot.

Resumption of the Mall program, approved this week by Secretary Ickes after work had been halted by complaints of tree lovers, moved another step toward fulfillment yesterday when the Congressional Commission on Enlargement of the Capitol Grounds indorsed plans for the $600,000 development.

Similar action by the Joint Committee on the Library is all that remains to be done to get the project under way. That the latter committee will approve the plans is virtually assured, park officials intimated.

Authority of the library committee is necessary to raze the old greenhouses and other structures in the Botanic Garden, located on the Mall between Pennsylvania and Maryland avenues, First and Third streets. Clearing of this area is required not only by the Mall plans but by the proposed Union Square development, surrounding the Grant memorial.

Transfer of the Botanic Garden site by the library committee to the Office of National Parks, Buildings and Reservations, as dictated by existing laws, will remove the last obstacle facing a program invisaged in 1792 by L'Enfant, Washington and Jefferson.

Their Federal City plan called for a great, open cista, stretching westward from the Capitol and, as modified by the McMillan plan of 1901 and the Fine Arts and National Capital Park and Planning Commissions, will be realized in the completed Mall development.

Awarding of the contract to build the two inner roads between monument and Capital, which was held up when Secretary Ickes ordered tree removal to stop, will be made soon, Arno B. Cammerer, chief of the Nation's park system, said last night.

Lorton Prison Funds Sought

Hazen Told $360,000 Is Needed for Buildings to End Overcrowding.

Capt. M. M. Barnard, superintendent of District penal institutions, yesterday reported to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen that $360,000 is needed to complete construction of buildings at the reformatory in Lorton, Va.

The Commissioners have indicated they will ask Congress for the money in the regular 1935 budget, with the stipulation that it be made immediately available.

Capt. Barnard recalled that $300,000 was appropriated for the project in two equal appropriations in 1931 and 1932 and stated that $18,781.80 remains unexpended at this time.

Four buildings have been completed and a fifth is under construction, and a fifth of the surrounding wall has been built. The $360,000 is needed to complete the walls and the fifth building, provide equipment, complete tunnels and extend water, sewer and electric lines.

Construction of four dormitories and two officers' quarters has already been started as a CWA project to relieve overcrowding pending completion of the new buildings.

Norris Plans New Reform

Senator Begins Fight for One-House Nonpartisan Nebraska Assembly.

Lincoln, Neb. (U.P.).—The two projects for which he waged a fight for years in the United States Senate now crowned with success, Senator George W. Norris, indefatigable Nebraska progressive, has turned to his home State for a new crusade in democracy.

Norris, the man who bolted the Republican party in 1928 to support Alfred E. Smith and left the ranks again last year to back the "New Deal," is directing the move from Washington.

In a letter to George Kline, of Lincoln, chairman of the Nebraska Progressive League, the senator called for an initiative to place the proposition before the Nebraska voters in the November, 1934, election.

Simplification of the State government by fusion of the two legislative houses and reduction of the number of legislators is no novel idea either to Norris or Nebraskans. For years Norris has advocated the idea. Early this year a movement to secure approval of the State Legislature for the plan was defeated in the State Senate.

Lethal Gas Asked.

Jackson, Miss., Jan. 4 (AP).—A bill to substitute lethal gas for the gallows in Mississippi as a means of execution was introduced in the State Senate today by Senator McIntosh, of Collins. # President Predicts 32-Billion U. S. Debt in Budget Message about $32,600 every minute of the day and night around the clock for the next six months.

4 Billions for RFC.

In the breakdown of the total of expenses for this year, the cost of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was set at $3,969,740,300. So far this year the RFC has spent only about $600,000,000, so that if the total figure given by the President is to be reached, five and one-half times that sum will have to be disbursed in the next six months.

A large part of this sum is estimated as possible expenditures for aiding financial institutions, either through loans or purchase of the preferred stock of banks. In some quarters on Capitol Hill it was doubted whether the RFC can spend $3,300,000,000 in the next six months unless economic conditions take a sharp turn for the worse, requiring widespread help for banks and insurance companies.

President Roosevelt apparently does not believe this will happen because his message was filled with contentions that the era of recovery had set in and would continue. In estimating revenue for the Government during this fiscal year, for instance, he used an index figure of industrial prosperity 14 points higher than last year. The index figure used for the next fiscal year was 17 points higher, or 98 of cent normalcy.

As a result Democratic leaders, including Senate Leader Joseph T. Robinson, expressed the belief that Mr. Roosevelt had painted the picture of the Government's finances as black as possible in order that the country might have a realistic view of what the New Deal is costing.

Brutally Frank.

President Roosevelt himself believed his message was the most brutally frank budget message ever submitted to Congress. It is his view that every appropriation becomes a contingent liability of the Government the moment it is made, and that while it may not be spent, on the other hand it usually is spent. Mr. Roosevelt believes the country has no right to be shocked, since the size of the appropriations have long been known.

The President, in making up his budget, used maximum estimates of expenditures in most cases, and in estimating revenues he made no allowance for receipts from war debts —thefirst time since the funding agreements that this figure has been omitted — increased liquor taxes or increased revenue from changes in the income tax laws. He pointed out that the latter two items might swell receipts by $200,000,000 annually.

Mr. Roosevelt estimated probable revenues for this current year at $3,259,938,756, and for the next fiscal year at $3,978,665,479. Receipts for the first six months of this fiscal year totaled $1,468,897,000, leaving 1,791,041,000 to be collected during the second half of the year if the President's estimate is to be realized.

The President placed the emphasis on actual and estimated expenditures by the Government during this and the coming fiscal year. In the way of new appropriations, he asked $1,166,000,000 for various recovery agencies for the next six months to supplement funds already authorized. This sum was included in his estimates of expenditures.

For the ordinary expenses of the Government, including debt retirement for 1935, the President asked $3,919,806,015, including $750,744,000 for the AAA production control program. In addition, Mr. Roosevelt proposed that Congress give $2,000,000,000 more to carry on the recovery program during the next fiscal year.

The President nersonally told Congressional leaders he preferred this appropriation in a lump sum, but if they wished it itemized, he would try to accomodate them, adding that in the latter case he would want authority to shift such funds from one account to another. It is expected Congress wil require that the sum be itemized, but will permit the President to shift funds within prescribed limitations.

Relief Needs in Doubt.

In suggesting a lump sum appropriation, the President contended that none knows what recovery efforts may be needed during the 1934-35 winter. Aid to States and cities for relief can not be stopped entirely by that time, but the was unable to estimate the exact need, the President told the Congressional leaders.

If he were required tobreak down the $2,000,000,000 into items, Mr. Roosevelt would assign $600,000,000 for relief, $500,000,000 for additional public works, $500,000,000 for the RFC to aid certain financial institutions, $300,000,000 to the CCC and the remainder to the Farm Credit Administration and the Home Loan Bank Board.

It is Mr. Roosevelt's desire to stop all emergency recovery endeavors after June 30, 1935. He does not contemplate any more large appropriations for public works after that date, but intends to draft a plan for National development, including such projects as the Missouri River Valley, which would cost about $500,000,000 a year. This sum would be covered in the regular budget and payable out of ordinary receipts.

The President has not been impressed with the practicability of plans set forth by advocates of slum clearance and housing projects and virtually has abandoned attempting anything on a large scale in that direction. He favors improving housing conditions, but takes the view that this could not be done on an efficient and economic basis.

Dickinson Assails Plan.

The sharpest criticism of the President's message came from Senator L. J. Dickinson (Republicna), of Iowa, who characterized it as "a confession of broken promises and a signal of despair." He said the activities of the Roosevelt administration constituted "an unknown peace-time record of extravagant expenditures and wilful waste."

"This country can not continue to exist half subsidized and half victimized," he asserted. "To borrow $10,000,000,000 between now and July 1 may be but the beginning of the end, so far as stable Federal finances are concerned."

Senator David A. Reed (Republican), Pennsylvania, said he believed the country able to endure a debt as large as $31,000,000,00, "if we can depend on the President's assurances that when the debt reaches that point the budget will be balanced and there is nothing to be worried about."

Fears Broken Pledges.

"Unfortunately," he continued, the President has not maintained his assurances on financial matters, such as maintenance of a sound currency and honoring promises to pay in gold. Either from necesity or choice they have been forgotten. The danger is that he will yield again under pressure."

Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, chairman of the Finance Committee, said he was more optimistic with reference to a surplus in the Treasury than the President. He thought the budget balance would be written in black ink long before 1936.

"The large deficits were to be expected because of the extraordinary expenditures for the recovery program," he added.

Senator James F. Byrnes, (Democrat), South Carolina, contended that the frankness of the message would serve to reassure the country as to the Treasury's ability to finance the Government. Senator Robert Carey (Republican), of Wyoming said: "I don't know where the money is to come from."

Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, (Democrat), Illinois, said he had felt "there has not been complete comprehension of the amount of expenditures the Government has undertaken." He added that he feared "what the President thinks can be reduced, he can not reduce."

Doubts Income Sufficient.

"I also fear lest the income for which he hopse, and which he is assured officials can be relied on, will not develop, as much as I would like to see him cindicated," Senator Lewis added.

Senator Charles L. McNary, Republican Senate leader, said "we will have to slow down this process of spending if we are ever to come back in earnings." House Republican Leader Bertrand Snell asserted: "I am so overcome and shocked by the amount these fellows propose to spend that it will take me several days to catch my breath."

Other Republicans in the House asked "where is the money coming from?" and expressed "shock and amazement." Speaker Henry T. Rainey said the message was "startling, indeed," but that such expenditures were required to bring about recovery.

But Senate Democratic Leader Robinson thought the President had counted up the maximum possible expenditures and the minimum of revenues. He said he was cheered, however, by the assurance of a balanced budget at the end of three years.

Cleveland Fire Chief Fights False Alarms

Cleveland (U.P.).—Irked by 1,800 false alarms so far this year, which, he says, have cost the city $630,000, Fire Chief James E. Granger is carrying a campaign against pranksters into the public schools.

The chief's move followed a recent evening foray of no-fire calls, in which 13 dead-end runs were made by the department. Twelve of the calls, coming from the same neighborhood were believed to have been turned in by the same alarmist.

Granger declared that each call, based on the department's annual expenses, amounts to a $350 cost. Firemen, talking to school children, are repeating the chief's warning that in false alarm arrests he will ask the courts to impose maximum sentences, $100 and costs and six months in jail.

Etiquette in Hog Killing.

Officer Fined $35, 10 Days' Pay After Rolling Dice for Dinner

Chicken dinners may come high, but Policeman Carl R. Burr, of the Fourth Precinct, paid $35 and an additional ten days' pay for his yesterday—and never tasted it.

Burr was found guilty by a Police Trial Board on charges of participating in a game of chance and failingto patrol his beat. It was alleged he rolled "high dice" with two other men to see who paid for three chicken dinners.

The policeman was suspended Christmas Eve when Capt. Jeremiah Sullivan, his commanding officer, happened to find him in a restaurant at 220 Seventh street southeast. Capt. Sullivan said a pair of dise rolled from Burr's hnad as he walked into hte room.

William Fletcher, of 114 Seventh street southeast, and John P. Kane, of 712 North Carolina avenue southeast, testified they were with Burr at the time. The trio were rolling "high dice" to see who paid for the dinners, the board was told.

A third charge of neglect of duty in failing to make an arrest when aware of a violation of the law, was dismissed. Fines of $25 and $10 were ordered on each of the other counts. Burr testified he had been in the room only a few moments when the captain entered.

Fund to Repair Washington's Quarters Asked

Winchester to Apply for CWA Fund on Shared Expense Basis.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 4 (Spl.).—The Winchester Common Council favors application for Civil Works Administration funds for repairing George Washington's headquarters here. No definite figure was set. The city, it was stated, will bear part of the expense.

A tax of $15 for retailers and $50 for wholesalers of 3.2 beer was passed.

Thirty Men Put to Work.

Thirty men started work on CWA projects in Frederick County today.

Refusal of several residents in the Star Tannery section to grant necessary rights of way for highway improvement there has thrown the project, already approved, into discard, W. Earle Edwards, county administrator, said.

Application of Frederick County for CWA funds to build additions to school buildings and with which to make the excavations and foundations for contemplated school buildings, has been held up until CWA officials decide whether the civil works funds can be used for the projects.

Unemployed List Grows.

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 4 (Spl.).—With registration of unemployed in Loudoun County increasing approximately 20 per day, the list of persons seeking work has reached 1,500.

Of this number, 150 men will be on jobs by the end of the week, according to J. Terry Hirst, local administrator. Projects include sidewalks in Round Hill, streets in Purcellville, widening King Street in Leesburg, and painting and repairing school buildings in each county district.

A $37,000 fund for county projects has been authorized by the CWA.

Nine More Jobs Sought.

Lexington, Va., Jan. 4 (Spl.).—The local civil works board has applied for nine additional projects.

Sewers for Lexington and eight Rockbridge County road projects comprise the list. The board now has 11,793 man-hours left to distribute.

The Rockbridge County board of supervisors approved a plan under which emergency relief for Buena Vista will be handled through the county emergency relief office in Lexington. Mrs. Elinor Robertson, relief director, will have charge.

Front Royal, Va., Jan. 4 (Spl.).—Pay rolls on six CWA projects in Warren County total $5,000 a week.

The jobs employ 353 men, while 45 additional workers have been furnished by the county reemployment committee for a PWA roadbuilding project, making a total of 398 men receiving work.

Town Manager K. B. Dutrow received notice today the State Public Works Board has approved application by Front Royal for $36,500 for a municipal building.

Orchard Loans Will Be Limited

Only Sound Applications to Be Considered.

Baltimore, Jan. 4 (AP).—George H. Stevenson, president of the Production Credit Corporation of the Baltimore Land Bank District, said yesterday the production credit association was established to help orchardists finance crop production needs and is not "a charitable institution."

He spoke at the first meeting of directors of the association, which plans to make credit available to orchardists of Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Delaware. It was organized in Martinsburg, W. Va., last week.

"What we must all understand," Stevenson said, "is that the lending funds for all production credit associations in this district come not from the Government but from the sale of debentures to private investors. When we realize this, we appreciate the fact that all loans must be thoroughly sound."

Official Defends Post Retention

County Treasurer Claims Constitution Support.

Richmond, Jan. 4 (AP).—G. Stuart Hamm, Albemarle County Treasurer, who has declined to relinquish his position to Henry A. Haden, county executive under a newly chosen form of county government, today said he was advised that the Constitution contemplates that change in form government shall take place only at the end of terms of Constitutional officers.

Meanwhile, checks for certain county obligations are being signed by both the treasurer and the county executive.

Hamm said he was advised also that he might be held responsible for county funds even if he withdraws.

More Members Sought, and New Institute Is Scheduled.

Richmond, Jan. 4 (Spl.).—The executive committee of the Virginia Police Executives' Association, meeting here, decided to embark upon a considerably extended work program during 1934.

The association, headed by W. E. Mahone, Chief of Police of Newport News, includes in its year's program continuation of the police training program, so successful last year over the State. A membership gain also is an objective.

Tentative plans call for a Police Institute next fall, devoted to detailed consideration of important police problems as distinguished from a police convention at which miscellaneous talks will be given.

The officers insist on the need of a police manual, containing the Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure. The cost of such a publication will be investigated.

Revised Tugwell Bill Given Senate

Scientists To Check Officials.

Under Senator Copeland's draft, non-partisan committees of scientists will check on all administrative officers provided with authority by the bill. There will be two such committees of five members each and with approval of three members public hearings may be called on any regulations proposed.

Only after these hearings, and then with the approval of three committee members, may the Secretary of Agriculture promulgate regulations.

A sweeping provision of the original bill requiring full formula disclosure on all proprietary drugs met with strenuous opposition by manufacturers, advertisers and publishers. The Copeland bill omits this, substituting for it requirements for label declaration of certain potent ingredients, coupled with label warnings against unsafe methods of administration.

Prof. Tugwell's requirement that a palliative be labeled as not a cure has been changed to compel labelling to show how the palliation is effected.

Important Section Rewritten.

Instead of prohibiting therapeutic claims for a drug if they are contrary to the general agreement of medical opinion, such claims are declared as misbranding if they are not supported by substantial medical opinion or by demonstrabl eciens tific fact.

Section 6. A food, drug or cosmetic shall be deemed to be misbranded (a) if its labeling is in any particular false, or by ambiguity or inference creates a misguiding impression.

This section has been changed radically to read:

Section 6. A food, drug or cosmetic shall be deemed to be misbranded (a) if its labeling is false or misleading; provided, that no drug shall be deemed to be misbranded under this paragraph by reason of any representation concerning any effect of such drug which is supported by substantial medical opinion or by demonstrable scientific fact.

Copeland Defends Bill.

Senator Copeland haid this involved no weakness of the measure. In these and all other possible ways, he said, the bill has been made clearer and more definite, without the sacrifice of any provision essential to the public welfare.

The revised draft provides that no publisher, advertising agency or broadcaster shall be guilty of violation by dissemination of false advertising, although a request for the address of the advertiser must be complied with.

An important addition to the measure authorizes the enforcement agency established by the bill to accept plans of representative advertising agencies for the self-regulation of advertising practices.

"The bill as it now stands," said Senator Copeland, "should receive the support of all consumers. It should likewise receive the endorsement of that great majority of the industries affected which are doing a reputable business. It is fair to all concerned."

Search for Noted Portrait Is Ended

Sister Buys Millais' Work of Mrs. Stanley.

London (U.P.).—A famous painter did the portraits of two sisters 60 years ago. He labeled the results "Yes" and "No." The painter was Millais.

One sister portrayed by the eminent artist was the wife of that Lord Stanley who made famous the expression: "Dr. Livingstone, I presume?" when he came upon the explorer in the interior of Africa. She was the subject of the picture entitled "No."

Before and since the death of Lady Stanley, her sister has been trying to bring the portrait into the family. It took Mrs. Myers, the subject of Millais' "Yes," 60 years to achieve her purpose.

Recently the picture came into the market at an auction, and Mrs. Myers was able to buy it for $1,500. Prior to its appearance at the auction the painting was thought to have disappeared.

The pictures by Millais brought fame to both sisters; brought them suitors, and eventually husbands, who had first fallen in love with their images.

Duce Approves Restoration Of Colosseum

Archeologists Are Vexed, but Original Grandeur Will Be Returned.

Rome (U.P.).—Mussolini has approved a partial restoration of the Collosseum to its original grandeur and the isolation of the monument of Castel Sant' Angelo, which was originally the mausoleum of the Emperor Hadrian.

The proposal to restore the Colosseum has aroused some criticism among the conservative archeologists here, but an examination of the plan shows that the work to be done is very limited and will not in the least alter the character of the famous Roman monument. In any case, this would not be the first time the Colosseum had undergone partial restoration.

Restore Steps.

What is proposed to be done is to restore the steps of the lower part of the amphitheater on the ground level or under it. A practical purpose is behind the idea, for the huge gladiatorial arena often is used nowadays for meetings, reviews and political gatherings and the presence of rows of ordered steps would facilitate the assembly of thousands.

The steps of the old Roman arena will be followed in their original lines and a large proportion of the stone used will be fragments of the original steps, which have been collected.

The Collosseum has suffered much from the hands of pillagers. During the Middle Ages it was used chiefly as a kind of free quarry to supply stone for the Rome builders. Several famous Roman palaces were built with stone taken from the Colosseum.

Large Park Planned.

The other project of isolating the Castel Sant' Angelo already is under way. It is proposed to build around it a large park. This park, covering 150 acres, will be three times as large as St. Peter's Square.

Among recent interesting archeological finds made in Rome have been discoveries along the Empire Way. Here, it is believed, the workmen have dug up what remains of the original House of the Censors of ancient Rome. The duties of these censors was, to begin with, to act as registry officers, taking note of births, deaths, marriages, immigrations and emigrations into the city, but later on they became censors of morals and good behavior.

New York, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Tall men cannot qualify for police chauffers under the new regime of Police Commissioner John F. O'Ryan.

"I have observed," he said, "that some of the men who drive the cars have to bend when they get into cars. That does not look so good. A man should be able to get in without lowering his head."

most any price for it—such as a 50 per cent cut of the gold content, even $3,000,000,000 of greenbacks.

Both Want Fear Dissipated.

It is notable that both sides not only agree upon the desirability of removing the uncertainty about the dollar, but both agree that to do so would releases a new fear-frozen tide of private capital into long term investment and enterprise, thus providing a "velocity" of the dollar calculated to solve much of the recovery problem in providing employment and increasing prices. The only ones likely to disagree would be the advocates of the commodity dollar. It so happens the chief advocate of the commodity dollar, Prof. George F. Warren, still has the ear of the President.

The interesting fact is, however, that Thomas, spokesman for congressional inflationists, and such inflationist foes as Warburg, Budget Director Douglas, Prof. O. M. W. Sprague and others of their school, agree upon the need for an end of uncertainty, if they do not agree upon the exact terms of ending it. Yet the latter already have told the President they would pay any price up to the limit of his powers under the Thomas amendment.

Because of this agreement upon the importance of reassuring private capital without delay, Thomas and Borah think the President, by consulting the leading advocates of all schools, could readily work out a compromise acceptable to all sides. Warburg has long since urged the President to do this.

President Sees Problem.

Events are bound to force the issue, in any case. The Treasury, studying the enormous financing burden falling within the next six months, is proposing to raise the money in the usual way—by bond issues. The President, in his budget message, spoke of the "borrowing problem."

"We shall have to borrow approximately six billion dollars of new money and, in addition, four billion dollars to meet maturities of like amount," he said.

This would indicate the Administration expects to offer bonds. If the public or the banks refuse to take them, recourse to impounding of reserve bank gold, to direct sale of notes to reserve banks or to greenbacks will be inevitable. So the question is first upto the public and the banks, unless, meanwhile, the decision is reached to use the Thomas amendment.

The Treasury's experience with the conversion bond offer recently was not such as to encourage hope of readily selling long term issues to the public. A billion dollars of Liberty 4¼s fall due April 15, which the public refused to exchange for the conversion bonds.

Banks Already Loaded.

Bank portfolios are already loaded with Government paper. On December 27, the reserve banks held $2,432,000,000 of Government securities. In 1929, the December average of such holdings was only $446,000,000. Thus, the reserve banks have added nearly two billions of Government securities to their portfolios. Membe banks have added well over a billion of Governments to their portfolios since the middle of 1930. After accumulating more than $800,000,000 of excess reserves, the reserve banks some time ago ceased open market operations, buying Governments.

Treasury officials contended yesterday that banks have ample funds to absorb the $10,000,000,000 of Government paper which is to be floated between now and the end of the fiscal year, June 30. It was said that no drive is to be put on, and no "baby bonds" are to be attempted to force the Treasury offerings.

Gold Price Unchanged.

Incidentally, the RFC gold price remained unchanged at $34.06 an ounce for the twelfth day, and there are some evidences of a standstill in the gold buying policy pending other decisions, including the willingness of Congress to extend the life of the RFC beyond January 22, as the Administration wishes.

Whatever the immediate policy on gold buying, including the Administration's pondering of a somewhat miscalled "free gold market," designed to attract all world gold here at artificial prices, the heavy budget requirements will force decisions which sereval congressional leaders prefer to have taken after consulation and conference designed to reconcile the divergent monetary viewpoints. Forced decisions, consequent upon a Treasury failure to suceed in financing, would seriously disturb the country, they believe, whereas, an end of monetary uncertainty would probably solve the financing as well as other problems.

U. S. to Restore 5% of Pay Cut Under Budget

President Finds Cost Rise Does Not Necessitate Further Return.

One of the powerful factors on behalf of restoration has been the severe cuts taken by members of Congress. They have lost $1,500 under the 15 per cent pay cut, an additional $1,700 by virtue of curtailment of their terms by two months, and other amounts through reduction in allowances. That aspect of the situation isn't very widely discussed publicly, despite its influence.

Representative James P. Buchanan (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, however, is backing the 10 per cent maximum cut fathered by Lewis W. Douglas, Director of the Budget, and recommended by the President. Mr. Douglas long has favored a varying salary scale for Government employes. He believes their wages should be reduced when living costs fall and rise to statutory levels when costs rise.

Although 1928 living costs are used as the yardstick which shall determine restoration of full pay for Government workers next year, no provision is made in the plan for increasing salaries above statutory levels, should living costs go beyond the 1928 standard.

Move on Armed Forces Forecast.

Decision to exempt the armed services from the prohibition against automatic promotions, which was forecast in The Post, was explained in the following language in the President's message:

"Among the legislative provisions appended hereto is one prohibiting automatic increases in compensation except in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps. The personnel of these services are engaged in a life service to their country. Some, by reason of the pay freezes, have sustained reduction in compensation of more than 25 per cent. They are, therefore, in a different category from those in other governmental agencies. They should, in 1935, be released from the restrictions on automatic increases in compensation."

Economy legislation recommended by the President included, in addition to reducing maximum salary cuts from 15 to 10 per cent, would continue in force next year the 1933 provisions relating to special salary reductions; those relating to compensation reductions for officers and employes in insular possessions; those relating to reductions in private pensions and pensions for military service prior to the Spanish-American War, with the proviso that percentage reductions shall be the same applied generally to the Government service.

Deficiencies could be incurred, on Presidential approval, where appropriations for pay became inadequate by reason of diminution of the pay cut, under another provision.

Would Keep Other Restrictions.

The other provisions the President would have continued in effect are those suspending automatic increases in pay, prohibiting filling of vacancies, reducing travel allowances, authorizing temporary assignments in the Postal Service, restricting transfer of noncivilian personnel, authorizing transfers of appropriations, reducing juror's and witnesses' fees and suspending reenlistment allowances.

The following language was proposed to govern promotions in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps:

"During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1935, this section (section 201 of part II of the 1933 Legislative Appropriation act) shall not apply to the commissioned and other personnel of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, and the amount to which the reduction of compensation under section 2 of title II of the act of March 20, 1933, shall be applied shall include increments of compensation which, under the provisions of law (without regard to economy laws), accrue during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1935, and would have accrued during the period during which automatic increases in compensation were suspended. This amendatory provision shall not authorize the payment of back compensation, but the provisions of law suspending administrative promotions and prohibiting reallocation of positions shall not be held to prohibit the increases allowed hereunder."

Jungle by Daylight.

Did you ever think of the interior of Brazil as anything but a dark and loathsome land, full of baleful miasmas by day and stalking terrors by night, where anacondas swung down from every tree, where fierce alligators and man-eating fish lurked in every pool, where jaguars crouched behind the leafy jungle growth and one might expect at any instant to hear the zing of an Indian's poisoned arrow?

Well, like most fond dreams of the armchair traveler, the terrors of the jungle have folded up their belongings and gone off to the other side of the moon. Exposed to the light of day or, more particularly, exposed to the bright and saucy eye of a young Oxford graduate, literary editor of the London Spectator, the dangers of central Brazil turn out to be, as he says, "considerably less than those encountered on any arterial road during a heat wave." Like most returned explorers, he would have liked to "pile on the agony a good deal." But when it was all over he found that "the spirit of burlesque had been our tutelar deity." "Jungle Epic" was merely "Jungle Lampoon."

* * * *

In the good-humored and lively pages of "Brazilian Adventure" (Scribner, $2.75), Peter Fleming, late of the Isis and the Oxford Union, recounts as truthfully as seems possible the events of a 3,000-mile trip, made in 1932, through Brazil from Rio de Janeiro to Para, at the mouth of the Amazon. Much of the country he crossed had never seen a white man before. Most of it remains unexplored. Matto Grosso may still hide ruined cities, vast and fabulous remains of a dead civilization, for all the world knows.

It was in search of these cities that Lieut. Col. P. H. Fawcett set out in 1925. With two other men he marched into Matto Grosso, and disappeared. In 1928 the Dyott expedition looked for traces of the party, and found little. In March, 1932, a Swiss trapper reported an old white man far in the interior. And in April, 1932, the Agony Column of the London Times ran an advertisement for another expedition to seek Fawcett. This Peter Fleming answered, and the resulting expedition is the one he describes in "Brazilian Adventure."

* * * *

It was almost farcically managed. It got only within a hundred miles of the region where Fawcett was last heard of, and it proved nothing. But Fleming and one or two of his more congenial companions managed to have a high time out of it. It is this spirit of care-free adventure, this mocking parody of serious explorations, this hilarious disillusion and unbounded resiliency of youth which mark the story and give it its flavor.

The parody was quite actual. Far on the Araguaya River, Fleming and Pettiward never spoke of a mild Indian in his canoe but as an "oncoming savage." The pop of a .22 was "the well-known bark of a Mauser." A harmless fly was "an insect whose slightest glance spelled death." With such young pleasantries they passed off a situation which was little more than boringly tedious. British they were, even in the jungle. Once they met an English missionary in the heart of that lonely country, and Fleming could scarcely get himself to open a conversation. When their party split up for a while, the good-bys of explorers were fiercely parodied. But in all this they but codified their disillusion.

* * * *

For the Brazilian plateau jungle was nothing like what they expected. They never saw a snake. There were no tribal drums, no warring Indians. Of avowedly hostile tribes they saw but few traces—the friendly Indians were completely dull, and abysmally bad as guides. Occasionally there would be jaguar tracks on a sand bar, but that was as close as the acquaintance came. The alligators were a fraud, their cunning and ferocity "all my eye and Sir John Mandeville."

Even the factually proven man-eating piranha fish passed them coolly by as the party waded up the Tapirape River. Stingrays were merely to be jumped over if they swam too close in clumsy panic. Mosquitoes were annoying, but no worse than at any summer resort. Ticks were plentiful and had to be removed, and some flies bit like our deer-flies. Otherwise the insects presented no menace. The famous mandioca, a foodstuff tasting "like a disheartened potato," is the boiled product of the poisonous cassava root—but when Fleming by mistake ate some raw root he had no ill effects. Finally, under the equatorial sun, he found that a topee was a nuisance, and he went the whole distance without a hat and found sunstroke a myth.

The true handicaps to the journey were the lazy and procrastinating ways of the natives, and the fact (in the more civilized parts) that the Brazilian likes to drive a car at full speed, however rough the road.

But the book is none the less exciting. The expedition met internal difficulties and divided its personnel, and down the Araguaya and Tocantins Rivers to Para the two factions raced to secure the much-needed funds which awaited there. Even though this race involved the odd ingredients of a Syrian's launch and intrigue to corner the petrol supplies and an agonizing effort to make the Brazilian boatmen hurey, it holds suspense of a first-rate quality.

And even though Fleming makes such a light thing of the hardships and privations, one can see between the lines a kind of reticent and reverse-English courage. That, too, gives the book its charm.

For "Brazilian Adventure" has this solid virtue, that it takes us into strange places with the kind of eyes and intelligence and spirit which our modern world has fostered. Says Fleming: "It takes far less courage to be an explorer than to be a charterer accountant." That is hard on our romantic ideas, but very good for our comon sense.

Critic Praises Two Who Quit To Aid Others

Reid of Fredericksburg Wins Point in CWA Job Controversy.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 4 (Spl.). City Councilman Cecil L. Reid yesterday in a public letter complimented Miss Mary Houston and Horace H. Smith for resigning as civil works employes of the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Park historic staff to make way for persons having dependents and being more acutely in need of jobs.

Reid had led criticism of Miss Houston, Mr. Smith, and Miss Ruby Dillard, who refused to resign saying Reid did not know the financial condition of her family.

Mr. Reid's contention that public and semipublic officials should not hold positions on the Reemployment Board led to the resignation from that body of City Manager Levin J. Houston, jr., Deputy District CWA Administrator Ray C. Hopkins, and Capt. James Shipp, of the Salvation Army.

District Administrator Hopkins replied to criticism against his work by Mr. Reid, saying any errors committed were caused by the difficulties of initiating an intricate new machinery. Hopkins added:

"It will be possible later to convince Mr. Reid that all unemployed persons have been treated fairly by the bureau."

It was recommended that Benjamin T. Pitts be made chairman of the reemployment board, and that Cecil Reid, E. G. Heflin and Julian J. Garner replace the resigning members.

Thirty-two men were yesterday put to work on the Gunnery Springs improvement project here, in charge of Foremen Eddie Baker and John Freeman.

Virginia Labor Cites 10-Point Assembly Plan

Legislative Program Asks Curb on Troops and Fund for Jobless.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 4 (AP).—The Virginia State Federation of Labor will urge restoration of pay cuts to State employes.

It has appointed a legislative committee to urge passage at the coming General Assembly of a 10-point program to make permanent in Virginia the benefits of the NRA and also to make other improvements in the condition of labor.

Major planks in Virginia labor's legislative program, as set forth by Charles J. Hughes, president of the State Federation, follow:

1. Ratification of the National child labor amendment and raising the standard of the State child labor law.

2. A bill to set up unemployment reserve funds, modeled after suggestions on unemployment insurance made by President Roosevelt.

Injunction Curb Asked.

3. Limitation of labor dispute injunctions so as to curb abuses of the injunction power by State courts as well as Federal courts.

4. A bill requiring rock dusting for mines—spraying rock dust in mines to settle the explosive coal dust.

5. A bill opposing a State constabulary and amendments to the act governing the State motor vehicle police. President Hughes said the law now permits State police to be used in strikes, and labor opposes this.

6. A barbers' bill amended to provide better sanitary conditions.

Another Strike Measure.

7. A bill to require localities to pay all expenses when military is used in the case of strikes.

8. Shorter work day and week for men and women in industry and minimum wages to conform with the NRA.

9. A wage collection law giving the State Labor Department the power to instigate legal action when necessary for the collection of wages due employes.

10. "Measures which are benefical to public schools, public health and labor inspection."

Mileage Voted By Legislators

West Virginians Reverse Former Action on Holiday Expenses.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 4 (Spl.). West Virginia's House of Delegates reversed itself today by voting payment of mileage to members for expenses incurred in returning to Charleston after the holiday recess.

Voted down yesterday, the proposal was brought up again today in deference to Delegate J. Shirley Ross (Democrat), Kanawha, who was absent when it was defeated. Ross has long advocated increased salary and mileage payments to legislators, although not affected himself, as he is a resident of Kanawha.

Delegates Frank R. Hill (Democrat), Pocahontas, and J. A. Harmon (Democrat), Putnam, asked no mileage warrants be drawn for them.

The House today approvad a bill authorizing the City of Charles Town (Jefferson County) to borrow Federal money for remodeling its municipal building. It also authorized the Berkeley County Court to transfer any or all district road funds to the county general fund.

A bill authorizing the Mercer County Board of Education to borrow $125,000 in Federal funds for a new high school at Athens was adopted by the Senate, which accepted a House bill carrying that amount as against one previously adopted by the Senate authorizing $200,000.

Woman Arrested In Bank Holdup

Held in Connection With Adrian Theft.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 4 (Spl.). Suspected of connection with the robbery of the Bank of Adrian December 11, Mrs. Helen Brenway, 33, of Bull Creek, Pleasants County, was held today in the St. Marys County Jail for questioning by Upshur County officers.

John Malik, 43, of Detroit, was shot and killed by Hill Stump in the holdup, and the other bandit, Lee Haskins, 30, also of Detroit, was captured soon afterward near Buckhannon. Loot of $1,800 was recovered.

A pair of woman's shoes in the red automobile in which the robbers fled led officers to believe a woman was connected with the crime, but no clew was received until yesterday when a Pleasants County man telpehoned certain information to Sheriff Morgan Bailey at Buckhannon. The arrest of Mrs. Brenway followed.

Corn-Hog Plan To Be Outlined

Frederick County Agent to Set Meetings to Explain Program.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 4 (Spl.).—County Agent I. Fred Stine is planning special meetings in Frederick County to explain the Federal hog-corn plan, whereby growers will receive 30 cents a bushel for corn acreage taken out of production and $5 a head on hog curtailment, based on certain adjustments.

Mr. Stine said the program is similar to the wheat control plan.

At a meeting of agricultural officials for this region at Luray, Tuesday, the corn-hog plan was explained. Mr. Stine said it was emphasized at the meeting that if the price of pork is to be raised, hog production must be curtailed.

Mr. Stine said any farmer who has produced an average of ten acres of corn and has farrowed an average of three litters of pigs a year, is eligible to enter the corn-hog contract. The farmer who has produced less than ten acres of corn and more than three litters of pigs may sign for hogs alone, and those who have produced more than ten acres of corn and less than three litters of pigs may enroll for corn alone. Any agreement is voluntary.

The mayor also invited members of the corporation commission and its division of banking, and Richmond members of the general assembly to attend the legislation meeting with him tomorrow afternoon.

In ordering the bill of review, the mayor followed procedure suggested by Judge Julien Gunn, who entered the order specifying the compensation for the receivers of the Richmond bank, which did not open after the bank holiday. Discrepancies between figures set up in the city budget and expense accounts filed by some of the officers were disclosed several days ago.

Fuller Control Sought.

City council desires a wider control over the elective officers, and will seek suitable legislation in the General Assembly. At present, the control of expense of these offices rests with the State Fee Commission.

24 Daily Papers Enter Virginia Press Contest

Publications to be Judged on the Basis of Four Factors.

Richmond, Jan. 4 (AP).—Twenty-four of the 29 daily newspapers in Virginia have entered the better newspaper contest for the C. C. Rhame certificates, which will be awarded at the midwinter meeting of the Virginia Press Association here January 19 and 20.

The three judges whose names will not be announced until after the awards are made are now going over the entries. They will base their decision on best front page, best general make-up, best handling of display advertising from a typographical standpoint, and the best press work.

A certificate will be awarded for the best paper in each of the four subjects, but in the event one newspaper is declared winner in all four, one certificate inscribed "For General Excellence" will be issued.

The size of the newspaper will have no bearing on the award.

Awards to daily papers will be made at each January meeting and awards to weeklies will be made at the annual, or summer, conventions.

All dailies now being judged are of the issue of Thursday, November 16.

In connection with the meeting, a newspaper clinic will be held. Other features include an address by Dr. Harcourt A. Moran, director of the Tennessee Valley Authority, who will speak on the authority's value to Virginia.

School Funds Face Assembly

Layman Believes Problem Is Most Important in Virginia.

Newcastle, Va., Jan. 4 (AP). State Senator George W. Layman, ranking member of the committee on public institutions and education, yesterday said the most important problem that will confront the General Assembly next week will be financing schools of Virginia.

Unwilling to commit himself definitely to vote for or against many of the measures that will be submitted, Senator Layman said he would oppose any effort to reduce the gasoline tax and diversion of road revenue for schools. The schools, he said, must look to some other source for funds.

Should Furnish Books.

Asked if he believed the State should take over the public school system, Senator Layman said he had always believed the State should assume instructional costs and furnish free textbooks, and the localities should then assume cost of capital outlay, transportation general operation and maintenance.

"The State Board of Education," he said, "has set up an optimum salary of $720 per teacher, the State putting up a minimum of $560 per teacher and the localities paying the difference.

Doubts Stauffer Plan.

"Under Dr. William G. Stauffer's plan," he said, "the State would force the localities to raise a definite amount of money and whatever difference there is between the amount and the optimum salary of $720 per teacher, the State would provide. I doubt if the State has authority to force the localities to levy the tax which Dr. Stauffer contemplates."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

Our Prices Go Down!

For a January Event

Beginning Today, 9:15 A.M.

The code has made woolen prices go up, milling wages go up, tailoring wages go up. Everything that we are selling now has to be replaced at a much higher price. If we could just close up shop for the next thirty days, we could reopen and make a long profit on everything we have in the store. However, we have got to sell what we have now for the very purpose of replacing at higher prices. If you know how to interpret what you read in the newspapers, you'll know how true all of this is. We are looking for crowds early this morning.

Dog Year For Japan.

A copyrighted dispatch in the New York Herald Tribune, from Wilfrid Fleisher, Tokyo correspondent, says that Gen. Sadao Araki, war minister, whose star is the brightest in the Nipponese heaven these days, greeted the advent of 1934 with particular pleasure. Mr. Fleisher says that the general sees in the fact that this is "dog year," which Japanese observe, a happy portent, because "in a dog year things come easily."

"The year 'dog' means smooth sailing in all affairs," Gen. Araki told his people. "The future of Japan, therefore, is bright. The empire is destined to exercise influence in the Far East, to weld the civilization of the Orient and Occident and to launch upon a holy mission to bring the salvation of the world."

In all sincerity and in all seriousness, it may be hoped that with Japan in the mood which is reflected by Gen. Araki's New Year pronouncement—a mood to launch upon a holy mission—the Nipponese observance of "dog year" does not coincide with China's observance of "cat year."

Speaking For Washington.

Further evidence that the District Commissioners intend to take a vigorous stand on legislative matters concerning Washington is seen in their disapproval of five out of seven bills submitted to them by the Senate and House District committees. The Commissioners made an excellent start when they conducted hearings on the liquor control bill and submitted to Congress a measure which appears to represent the consensus of local opinion. Now they have indicated that District bills originating in Congress will be considered on their merits rather than on the basis of politics or expediency.

There is sometimes an unfortunate tendency on the part of District officials to overemphasize the wishes of congressmen and Federal executives in passing judgment upon District questions. Washington has had too few champions. As the people are disfranchised, their will has not been made articulate. The Federal municipality too often has accepted, without protest, any measures proposed for its welfare. Likewise, local needs have sometimes been neglected for want of initiative on the part of District officials. It is the more stimulating to see that the present Commissioners are entering upon their duties with an aggressive attitude directed toward the welfare of the District.

It is to be hoped that the Commissioners will continue to extend their influence over legislative matters pertaining to the local community. If local officials take a positive and constructive position on District issues with which they are entirely familiar, their influence will unquestionably be a cogent factor in shaping legislation for Washington.

Restoring Salaries.

President Roosevelt's recommendations to Congress concerning Federal salaries overshadows any action he may take toward adjustment of the pay scale during the next six months. The present law will expire on July 1. Salary adjustments to be put into effect during the next six months by the President's executive order are expected to be small. But if Congress should accept the Chief Executive's new plan, he would have authority to retain the proposed reduction regardless of fluctuations in the cost of living.

Federal employes are not enthusiastic over the flexible system under which their salaries have been 15 per cent below the base rate of pay during the last six months. But this method does give them assurance that any increase in the cost of living will be reflected, at the end of each six-month period, in commensurate salary increases. Under the plan now proposed by President Roosevelt that assurance would be taken away.

Budget estimates for the fiscal year 1935 contemplate payment of salaries at 90 per cent of the base rates. But those sections of the economy law which the President would have re-enacted, call for full restoration of the base pay, under certain conditions. To bridge this inconsistency the President requests authority to permit executive departments, independent establishments, the legislative branch and the District of Columbia to incur deficits for the increase of salaries, if that should become necessary because of rising costs of living. Thus, the automatic flexible system would be transformed into an arrangement under which salary adjustments would be largely discretionary with the President.

Two arguments may be advanced in favor of this plan: First, it would give Congress a chance to make a pretense of saving money that might later be required to make up deficiencies; second, it might be used by the President to deny Federal employes salary increases, even though the cost of living should rise above the 1928 level. Both of these arguments tend to discredit the measure. It is to be hoped that Congress will find a more equitable means of applying the flexible system, if the entire pay cut is not to be eliminated. Certainly there is no logic behind a plan that would preserve the form of a flexible salary arrangement and then make compliance with that plan contingent upon the will of the President.

The Budget Message.

In his economy message of March 10, President Roosevelt said: "For three long years the Federal Government has been on the road toward bankruptcy." He estimated that the accumulated deficit for the four fiscal years to June 30, 1934, probably would total $5,000,000,000 and cited this figure as proof of the dangerously disordered state of the public finances. He affirmed that the deficit had contributed to the collapse of our banking system, accentuated the stagnation of the economic life of the people, and added to the ranks of the unemployed. He warned Congress that "upon the unimpaired credit of the United States Government rest the safety of deposits, the security of insurance policies, the activity of industrial enterprises, the value of our agricultural products and the availability of employment."

Pledging himself to economy in the interests of national recovery, he asked for authorization to effect immediate reductions in Government salaries and pension outlays, and concluded his stirring appeal with the assurance that "If this is done, there is reasonable prospect that within a year the income of the Government will be sufficient to cover the expenditure of the Government."

In his budget message of yesterday, the President estimates total outlays for the current fiscal year, less public debt retirements, at $9,403,000,000. Against that sum he offsets receipts estimated at $3,259,900,000, leaving uncovered outlays on ordinary and emergency accounts of approximately $6,100,000,000. Including certain additional expenditures not embraced by the budget estimates, which amount to $1,166,000,000, the public debt is expected to show an increase of $7,300,000,000 during the present fiscal year.

For the coming fiscal year 1934-35, a further debt increase of $2,000,000,000, representing outlays for relief purposes, is believed to be necessary, bringing the total public debt of the country to $31,834,000,000 by June 30, 1935. The President explains that "this excess of expenditures over revenues amounting to over $9,000,000,000 during two fiscal years, has been rendered necessary to bring the country to a sound condition after the unexampled crisis which we encountered last spring. It is a large amount, but the immeasurable benefits justify the cost."

In the light of these figures, the efforts of the Director of the Budget to keep down ordinary expenditures and to provide a surplus out of ordinary receipts for financing emergency spending programs seem futile, even painful. The President himself has ceased to expatiate upon the distinction between ordinary and emergency expenditures. He rightly emphasizes the amount of the debt increase, because that provides the best measure of the extent to which he has fallen short of his goal of a balanced budget. It is true that a proportion of the uncovered debt outlays represents loans that will be repaid. But after making most liberal allowance for such recoverable outlays, it is certain that a large part of the $9,000,000,000 of emergency indebtedness already incurred or in prospect will have to be carried by the taxpayers of the country.

The President has repeated in December what he said in March: namely, that recovery rests upon the good credit of the Government. But in March he was asserting that the budgetary deficit had to be eliminated speedily as a means of salvation. In December, he believes that recovery is dependent upon the expansion of a program of emergency spending which is piling debts upon debts and threatening to impair the confidence of investors. As the President said last March, "too often in recent history liberal governments have been wrecked on rocks of loose fiscal policy. We must avoid that danger." We can not avoid it, unfortunately, unless a stop is put soon to deficit financing. Long continued, it alienates investment support, causes taxpayers to revolt and leads eventually to compulsory resort to fiat money issues.

In The Past.

Speaking before the Baltimore Traffic Club, Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, formerly of the Marine Corps, told his audience that he was eligible for membership, since he has been president of a railroad in Nicaragua for a short time in 1912.

"Some New York banking firm had loaned some money to the Nicaraguan government," the general is quoted as having said, "and had taken a railroad and a couple of plantations as security. The rebels tore up some of the rails, so the Marines were sent down to run the railroad—and collect the interest on the loan.

"When we arrived I made myself president of the railroad and remained in office for seven weeks, that is, until after the election—a situation which the Marines had well in hand.

"It was greatly desired by powers in the States that a Mr. Diaz be elected president. So we corraled a province of 65,000 persons and found 412 who would vote for Mr. Diaz.

"Then we searched the laws of Nicaragua and discovered a notice of election, or plebiscite, was necessary. However, the amount of notice wasn't stated.

"So it was just a simple matter to tell these 412 citizens who favored Diaz to report at the one voting booth in the province at 10 a. m. on a certain day. Then at 5 minutes of 10 a bugler blew assembly and announced that an election would be held in five minutes. That was sufficient notice according to law.

"The result of the election was an overwhelming victory for Mr. Diaz, the Marines having the situation well in hand."

After due discount has been made for the loquacity of Gen. Butler, and after it has been remembered that in those hot-headed young days his zeal and daring might have led him into exceeding his orders and authority, the incident is still unsavory. We may be thankful that under our new policy of nonintervention, announced by Secretary Hull and reiterated by President Roosevelt, it will be impossible for such incidents, which make most of our citizens blush with shame, to recur.

Shelling From The Left.

Because, as they explain, a monthly magazine can no longer cope with events and conditions in this "epoch of swift and decisive happenings," the editors of the New Masses have begun weekly publication. Appearing four times as often as it has in the past, "America's only revolutionary weekly" ought to add considerable spice to life, as well as to answer that request which President Roosevelt recently made for more and better criticism.

Both the prospectus and the leading editorial make it clear, if there was ever any doubt, that "The New Masses supports the militant sections of the working class, the living core of which is the Communist party." The paper boasts that it does not like "the enemies of the working class, the upholders of capitalism: bankers, militarists, imperialists, Fascists, labor fakers, Social Fascists, and all other open or hidden defenders and apologists of the capitalist order."

Nor is there room for misapprehension as to the specific identity of some of its enemies. The cover portrays President Roosevelt as a quack-medicine salesman doing a spiel from the back seat of an automobile, trying to unload on an open-mouthed and gullible public such nostrums as "NRA" and "CCC" and "CWA." The editors hold that the program of putting 2,500 unemployed artists to work doing murals and friezes, "ignoring their sensibilities" merely "exposes the perennial bourgeois piffle about 'pure art' * * *" Moreover, continues the indictment, "Now that it is clear to everyone, even artists, that capitalism is decaying and NRA is a flop, our affable dictator is attempting to bribe the molders of public opinion and channelizers of mass emotion with pitifully small handouts from the Federal Treasury."

The editors decry the "Fascist tendencies" of that administrative division over which Gen. Johnson presides and charge that inflation is a capitalist trick to save the credit and banking structure, which is at least a refreshing viewpoint after all the bankers have had to say to the contrary. Not even Repeal wins favor; on the contrary, the New Masses feels that "it has been thoroughly and systematically bungled" and that it is, to quote a headline over the article, "The Big Holdup." As for the members of Congress, they are, according to Marguerite Young, "some five hundred bankers, corporation lawyers, Ku Klux Klansmen, factory owners, preachers, insurance brokers, vaudeville actors, and off numbers such as former representatives of Machado, the Assassin, and gentlemen of unknown occupations."

No sort of liberal publication, weekly, monthly or annual, would be complete without a plea for too-long-deferred justice for Tom Mooney; New Masses manages to achieve a happy combination, with a poem by Michael Gold, poet laureate of the revolution, on "Tom Mooney Walks At Midnight" in which the "class-war prisoner" is represented as brooding over the "far-flung comrade-armies who tend the flame of Comintern."

Even the high literary ability of such able editors and contributors as Granville Hicks, Josephine Herbst, John Dos Passos, Scott Nearing, Louis Adamic, Langston Hughes, Erskine Caldwell, Henri Barbusse and John Strachey will be taxed to maintain the standard of withering scorn for the pale "Roosevelt revolution" which is set in the first issue. Like paprika, the New Masses ought to give a pungency to things.

"Gift Cigars."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am sure The Washington Post would not knowingly permit a misstatement of facts to appear in its columns and that when such misstatement occurs it will be glad to correct it.

I refer to an article appearing in The Post of January 3 entitled "U. S. Officials Get $50 Cigars From Ship Line," and to an editorial appearing in this morning's Post entitled "Gift Cigars." If the reporter who wrote the article in your issue of January 3 had phoned me, as some other reporters did, he would have had his facts straight.

I am in no way whatever connected with the New York company who, it is stated, made presents of cigars to Government officials. I represent Southern shipping companies and have represented Southern shipping companies in Washington since 1919.

The attached is a copy of a letter written and delivered to Assistant Secretary of Commerce Mitchell yesterday and a copy of this was delivered to The Post in the expectation it would correct some of the statements made in the article of January 3. In view of what has been published in The Post and in fairness to me, I think The Post should now publish in full my letter of January 3 to Mr. Mitchell.

I fully appreciate the trials and tribulations of newspaper reporters and the difficulties they experience in getting all of the facts, and this is not intended as a complaint against or criticism of any reporter. I am simply asking that as the facts are now in your possession they be given the same prominence as the article and editorial of January 3 and 4, respectively.

HARDIN B. ARLEDGE.

(Ed. note—The letter to Mr. Mitchell said that he was not the agent for the Black Diamond Steamship Co. and was in no way connected with the organization which presented cigars to bureau officials. Mr. Arledge expressed regret that "the Christmas spirit" prompted him to send a "small, inexpensive compact" to Mr. Mitchell's secretary; he did it merely, he said, in appreciation of the courteous treatment that had been accorded him. "I sent no gifts of any description to an official or any one in the Government who was or is in a position to make any recommendation or decision respecting any matter in which my people are interested," Mr. Arledge said.)

Eggs and the AAA.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to correct an apparent misunderstanding of Executive policy which was expressed in your leading editorial of this morning. You seemed to be under the impression that the purpose of the quoted press release issued by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration on December 30 was to extend the elasticity of the alphabet as applied to Federal functions.

I fear you are in error. Let me quote from the original press release, which lies before me:

" * * * Hatcheries subject to the code shall use eggs weighing not less than 23 ounces to the dozen and with no single egg weighing more than 1 5-6 ounces."

If you will take pencil and paper, I will demonstrate the real intention of the Administration. The problem as stated calls for a dozen of eggs to weigh not less than 23 ounces. This dozen must be composed of 12 eggs weighing not over 1 5-6 ounces each.

Now let us bring out the daring, the originality, the high spirit of scholastic adventure and enterprise which historians yet unborn shall mark by this milestone. To place this demonstration within the understanding of the least literate reader, we will employ simple fractions, eschewing algebra, calculus, trigonometery, logarithms and those whispered, priestly rites practiced with the slide rule.

Twelve eggs multiplied by 1 ounce gives 12 ounces. Twelve eggs multiplied by five-sixths of an ounce equals 10 ounces. Twelve ounces plus 10 ounces equals the weight of 12 eggs weighing 1 5-6 ounces each, or 22 ounces.

The edict now states itself thusly:

"Under the code, hatcheries must use eggs weighing not less than 23 ounces to the dozen, each such dozen to be composed of 12 eggs weighing a total of not more than 22 ounces."

This is not a continuation of experiments with the elasticity of the alphabet. This is the first brave expedition in a new unknown, one as daring as the initial voyage of Columbus or the first ingestion of an oyster.

JOHN KNOX.

Economic Problems 200 Years Ago.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would like to know what the desperate emergency is that calls forth the new order for the surrender of gold by the citizenry down to the last dollar, on pain of fine and imprisonment? As far as my historical knowledge goes, this is the first time since Louis XIV and Louis XV of France, that such an edict has been issued, the emergency at that time being the depleted condition of the state's treasury, and this a method by which it could be replenished.

The scheme in short called in all the currency and then reissued it with one-half of its original content, turning one-half back to the people and retaining the balance for the state. The penalty was death by hanging for those who did not comply with this order.

It would seem our administrators are in desperate straits when they have to resort to methods 200 years old, which were at that time termed tyrannical, instead of devising something new and original.

W. G. EISINGER.

Protesting Alien Employment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A standard has been set, at least informally, that citizens shall be given preference in spending public funds. This seems only fair both as to State and Federal money, but in two important respects it apparently is not being followed.

For instance, there is no effort as far as I know to learn whether applicants for relief are citizens. It would seem easy to find out. Temporary relief to aliens may be justified, but if it is to be for very long, the country of citizenship should be given that responsibility.

There is evidence that as many as a million aliens are gainfully employed in this country holding jobs that would otherwise go to citizens. According to the census of 1930 there were over 2,000,000 aliens gainfully employed in the country, and if only a million are now so employed receiving the minimum of $14 weekly they are receiving over three-quarters of a billion dollars a year that would otherwise go to citizens.

It seems there is no authoritative information on this alien employment problem. Even the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and the office of Senator Wagner indicate that employment statistics come very largely from the American Federation of Labor. Aside from the fact that its primary object is to further its interests, it represents, I am told, but 25 per cent to 35 per cent of American labor.

This would suggest that although the Administration has been in office nine months, there is no authoritative first-hand independent information about our most important problem although frequent estimates and the like are given publicity with the appearance of authority.

At this time when foreign countries owe us billions which are not going to be paid, when large quantities of public money are being distributed, and the burdens on the taxpayers are becoming heavier, there seems no good reason why we should provide jobs and relief for large numbers of aliens.

This matter is brought to your attention for what it may be worth in the hope that its importance will justify investigation and steps taken to salvage this vast sum for our citizens and taxpayers.

S. A. HOOKER.

If the Truck Is Going to Town Anyway, Why Not Let It Carry a Load?

By Robert Quillen

If you live in a town of considerable size and have little opportunity to observe RFC or CWA workers, you will be interested in some of their achievements.

Twelve men, guided by a foreman and a subforeman, were engaged in hoeing the grass from roadside drainage ditches.

"This grass was planted here," said he, "to keep the ditches from washing."

"If I were you," said the foreman, "I would be careful not to talk myself out of a job."

At another time and place, some scores of men were engaged in planting trees in parallel rows to adorn a small town's streets.

The trees—mere saplings given free of cost by a nearby farmer—were taken up with a two-foot spread of root.

Post-hole diggers were used to dig the holes and planting the saplings was much like ramming the charge into an old-fashioned muzzle-loading gun. The roots broke or bent and pointed skyward as the trees were forced in the holes.

Every man on the job knew the holes should have been at least three feet in diameter, and expected the trees to die—as they did before the first frost.

The road was supposed to be topsoiled, but the Government provided money for labor only and farmers do not give the top soil from their fields.

The workers used such dirt as was offered them and most of it proved to be sticky clay. When winter rains and frosts have done their work, the road should be an excellent imitation of the Argonne front.

The laborers on this project were practical men. They knew they were making bad matters worse. And the best of them were ashamed.

Useful labor has dignity. It has the right to feel pride in its achievement. To deny it this poor satisfaction is to defraud it of a part of its wage.

Though the chief purpose of the CWA is to distribute wages in lieu of a dole, what end is served by spending the money foolishly?

Those who must pay the bill are entitled to something to show for their money.

With
Carlisle Bargeron

OF COURSE, the reason Mr. Roosevelt is likely to have Congress in the palm of his hand for some time to come is that he is still popular with the country and also there is a reluctance on the part of everybody to rock the boat even though the smooth sailing of this boat may bring them to a manner of living and government they won't like. But I believe frankly that were conditions normal and the President subjected to criticism, as have been other Presidents, his relations with the legislative body would be more cordial than those of some Presidents I have known.

BARGERON.

He has an unmistakable way about him. It is difficult to work up any great warmth against him even when you know he is doing wrong.

* * * *

Consider now his manner before the Congress on its opening day. Apparently without the slightest guile, or what the girls call "blarney," he congratulated the members for the intelligent, statesmanlike way in which they had met the crisis last March. It made some of them blush and look at him twice, but after that second look they must have been convinced of his sincerity, because he kept a straight face. He referred to them as "we," so to speak, told of the things "they together" had done. (The quotes are mine.)

It made them swell up. I imagine it would be a treat to hear one of them back in his tome town telling a group on the corner how he and the President saved the country. The first thing we know Congress will feel so important that it will pass a law making us celebrate its birthday.

* * * *

Of more importance than any of this, however, was Mr. Roosevelt's move to check the slight rumblings that were developing over Congress not wanting to be just a rubber stamp. To appease these vanities he intends in the future to let his bills originate in a Senate or House committee, instead of sending them up to the Hill already prepared, as in the past.

It will be the same, of course, but it will look different and the members will get the impression they are having a hand in the shaping of the legislation.

* * * *

The most far-reaching plan of Mr. Roosevelt's, to keep Congress in hand, though, is yet to be worked out definitely. Under this plan there will be no more congressional investigations, no fishing expeditions as we have had in the past.

Instead, as the Administration so ingenuously puts it, there will be continuing investigations of everything. In this way there will never be any scandals, so to speak, no Falls, no Daughertys, no income tax outrages, just a smooth running Government and happy people all the time.

These continuing investigations would be carried on by officials of the Government sitting frequently with congressional committees. Whenever the committees heard of any wrongdoing or of any sins of commission or omission they would simply convene the committee and ask the particular Government official to come up and explain it away.

* * * *

I know of no better example of the way it would likely work out than the way a rather similar arrangement has worked out with the Veterans Bureau. There was a department that used to give us a scandal a day. Finally Director Hines came along.

He adopted the practice of agreeing with everything every member of the House Veterans Committee said. As each and every one of them made some criticism or charge the director would agree: "You are right, we should not have done that" or "we should have done that," as the case might be. And he would make the congressman believe he was downright appreciative for what the congressman had said. I don't know whether things are running better in the bureau or not. But we hear less about it. That's the point.

The Sonnet

The sonnet, a poem of 14 lines, came into England the middle of the sixteenth century, and reached tremendous popularity about 1600. Shakespeare, Sidney, Spencer and many others wrote sonnet-sequences; and Shakespeare's sonnets are of course the best in the language.

In the first half of the seventeenth century Milton wrote a few sonnets that are magnificent. Then this form of verse went entirely out of style for more than a hundred years. Why men should write poems of exactly 14 lines on God, nature and women in 1600, and not do it in 1700, is interesting.

During the nineteenth century the sonnet became once more tremendously popular. Keats, Rossett, Mrs. Browning were masters of the form; and in America one of our greatest sonneteers is Longfellow. Today a sequence of beautiful sonnets has been written by Edna St. Vincent Millay.

One of the best sonnets in the English language is by the Elizabethan Michael Drayton, the one beginning:

"Since there's no help, come, let us kiss and part."

Childish Rage Best Met by Calm Words

Little children are generally animists and attribute life to all objects with which they come in contact. At times a battle will be staged with blocks that refuse to stay in place, or screams of rage will ensue when a toy proves unmanageable. Sometimes a toy will be torn to pieces and hurled out of sight because of its wilful malice.

By the time it grows up the child has learned that sticks and stones have no independent life of their own, though most adults keep a vestige of their childhood attitude when they fuss at the weather or swear at the rocking-chair which attacked an instep in the dark. But as a rule they do not take these hangovers from babyhood very seriously and will laugh at themselves for a childish outburst.

In some cases, however, the adult does not develop beyond the childish state. He fights with inanimate objects all his life, often getting into his own way, and causing himself untold trouble by his attitude. It is amusing in the nursery to see the tiny rage of a baby as he fights with an intractable toy, but it ceases to be amusing when the baby is a grown man or woman.

Feathers and Pleats Creep Back in Style

Peasant Collars, Basques, Fluffy Sleeves Are Gaining, Too.

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—Peasant collars, accordion pleats, and flat feathers for trimming are creeping into the new mode.

Some white satin evening dresses have large dotted or print organzine over-pieces. These have round, draped collars which stand out from the neck and tie in peasant fashion. In addition there are basques and fluffy sleeves.

The same off-the-neck idea is carried out in many new tie silk collars, worn with wool dresses and coats.

Variations of this sort of collar include a simple round piece of fur at the top of a high neck satin evening dress.

Bands of flat feathers, which sometimes are not feathers at all, but made of a sort of velvet or chenille, are being used as trimmings on small evening wraps.

Such a wrap is in contrast to the prevailing high front, lowback decolletage. It crosses in the back, hiding the decolletage waistline. Its sash effect in the back ends in a long formal train.

With the sleeveless, wool evening dress, for evening in the country, the hip-length, unlined coat is worn.

Many evening skirts are still narrow, but dresses of tulle are among those that spread widely at the hemline.

There are many two-colored evening gowns, such as pale gray crepe with inserts of dark gun metal tone on the bodice.

While color contrast is often seen in the evening dresses, daytime frocks are tending more and more toward monotone effects.

Added touches to the solid colored crepe dresses, which are as yet retaining the princess silhouette, are unpressed pleats or darts, and big sleeves gathered into the armholes.

New features for afternoon dresses are moire lining which match the tunics of two-piece dresses, but which contrast with the costume. Such an example is brown with turquoise.

A gray wool dress may have a fine, white linen jabot, and pinch tucks to shape the blouse at the neckline.

Sports fabrics are largely British. Tricot wools in crossed barred effects are used in scarfs, sweaters, gloves, blouses and socks. And bright Scotch plaids are popular for both divided and one-piece skirts.

Massage to Taper Fingers.

Women's hands have a subtle allure if they are beautiful, according to Constance Bennett. She says that tapering fingers may be cultivated by gentle massage of the finger ends night and morning.

Fabric and Kid Gloves.

A fabric glove with a kid palm for driving is favored by ZaSu Pitts. She has them in several shades of brown, gray and tan.

Roosevelt Claims Business Upswing in Budget Message to Congress

Relief Must Continue In 1934-35, He Warns

Disbursements Brought Higher Farm Prices, an Increase in Trade, More Jobs, New Confidence in Banks, Chief Executive Declares.

To the Congress of the United States:

I transmit herewith the budget for the year ending June 30, 1935. It contains also estimates of receipts and expenditures for the current year ending June 30, 1934, and includes statements of the financial operations or status of all governmental agencies, including the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The estimates herein given and included in the budget have to do with general and special funds—the Government's moneys. They do not relate to trust and contributed funds, which are not Government moneys, except where expressly referred to as such.

In my annual message to the Congress I have already summarized the problems presented by the deflationary forces of the depression, the paralyzed condition which affected the banking system, business, agriculture, transportation and, indeed, the whole orderly continuation of the Nation's social and economic system.

I have outlined the steps taken since last March for the resumption of normal activities and the restoration of the credit of the Government.

Of necessity these many measures have caused spending by the Government far in excess of the income of the Government.

The results of expenditures already made show themselves in concrete form in better prices for farm commodities, in renewed business activity, in increased employment, in reopening of and restored confidence in banks, and in well-organized relief.

Exclusive of debt retirement of $488,171,500 for this year, budget estimates of expenditures, including operating expenses of the regular Government establishments and also all expenditures which may be broadly classed as caused by the necessity for recovery from the depression will amount this year (ending June 30, 1934) to $9,403,-006,967.

This total falls in broad terms into the following classifications:

Totals Up to June 30

| | |
|---|---|
| General: | |
| Departmental | $2,899,116,200 |
| Legislative | 17,718,500 |
| Independent establishments | 616,857,067 |
| | 3,533,691,767 |
| Less public debt retirements | 488,171,500 |
| Total, general | 3,045,520,267 |
| Emergency: | |
| Public Works Administration | 1,677,190,800 |
| Agricultural Adjustment Administration | 103,250,000 |
| Farm Credit Administration | 40,000,000 |
| Emergency Conservation Work | 341,705,600 |
| Reconstruction Finance Corporation | 3,958,740,350 |
| Tennessee Valley Authority | 19,000,000 |
| Federal Land Banks | 52,350,000 |
| Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation | 150,000,000 |
| National Industrial Recovery Administration | 4,250,000 |
| Total, emergency | 6,357,486,700 |
| Total, general and emergency, less public debt retirements | 9,403,006,967 |

As against these expenditures, which have either been appropriated for or for which appropriations are asked, the estimated receipts for this fiscal year (ending June 30, 1934) are $3,259,938,756.

On this basis, including, however, certain additional expenditures for 1934 which are not included in the budget estimates but which I believe to be necessary and amounting to $1,166,000,000 as shown in a subsequent table herein, the excess of expenditures over receipts will be $7,309,038,211. Interest charges on the borrowings in excess of budget estimates will slightly increase this figure.

On the basis of these estimates, the public debt, in the strict sense of the term, at the expiration of this fiscal year will therefore amount to approximately $29,947,000,000, or an increase as shown above of $7,309,-068,211.

However, as against this increase in the total debt figure, it is right to point out that the various governmental agencies have loans outstanding with a book value of $3,558,516,189 against which collateral or assets have been pledged.

In order to make clear to the Congress what our borrowing problem is for the next six months, permit me to remind you that we shall have to borrow approximately $6,000,000,000 of new money and, in addition, $4,000,000,000 to meet maturities of a like amount.

The budget estimates of expenditures, exclusive of debt retirement of $525,763,800 and exclusive of such sum as may be necessary for new and extraordinary recovery purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1935, amount to $3,960,798,-700.

Again summarizing the main headings of these expenditures, they fall into the following items:

Budget Estimates Summarized

| | |
|---|---|
| General: | |
| Departmental | $3,202,074,900 |
| Legislative | 18,734,500 |
| Independent establishments | 542,466,600 |
| | 3,763,276,000 |
| Less public debt retirements | 525,763,800 |
| Total, general | 3,237,512,200 |
| Emergency: | |
| Public Works Administration | 1,089,883,100 |
| Agricultural Adjustment Administration | 5,000,000 |
| Emergency conservation work | 65,190,000 |
| Reconstruction Finance Corporation | [1]480,436,600 |
| Tennessee Valley Authority | 31,000,000 |
| Federal land banks | 12,650,000 |
| Total, emergency | 723,288,500 |
| Total, general and emergency, less public debt retirements | 3,960,798,700 |

It will be noted that many of these items such as public works fall under appropriations made in 1933, the actual expenditures not taking place until after June 30, 1934.

The above figures do not include additional loans by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. If its loaning authority is extended beyond June 30, 1934, it is contemplated that any additional loans by it would thereafter be taken from the new and additional recovery fund hereinafter referred to.

The estimates of receipts for the next fiscal year (ending June 30, 1935) exclusive of foreign-debt payments, of increased liquor taxes and of increased revenue flowing from amendments to the existing revenue law, amount to $3,974,665,-479.

Therefore, exclusive of debt retirement, these budget estimates for the next fiscal year show a small surplus of $13,866,779. But it must be borne in mind that this surplus does not include any additional expenditures for extraordinary recovery purposes.

It is clear that the necessity for relief and recovery will still be with us during the year 1934-'35. Additional relief funds will be necessary. Further needs of the country prohibit the abrupt termination of the recovery program. No person can on this date definitely predict the total amount that will be needed, nor the itemizing of such an amount. It is my best judgment at this time that a total appropriation of not to exceed $2,000,000,000 will, with the expenditures still to be made next year out of existing appropriations, be sufficient.

I shall therefore ask the Congress for appropriations approximating that amount.

This amount is not included in the budget estimates. If appropriated and expended, therefore, it will change the small estimated surplus of $13,000,000 into a debt increase of nearly $2,000,000,000. It is only fair, of course, to say that such a debt increase would be partially offset by loans made against collateral and assets pledged.

Therefore, the total debt, if increased by the sum of $2,000,000,000 during the fiscal year 1935, would amount to approximately $31,834,-009,000 on June 30, 1935. It is my belief that so far as we can make estimates with our present knowledge, the Government should seek to hold the total debt within this amount. Furthermore, the Government during the balance of this calendar year should plan to bring its 1936 expenditures, including recovery and relief, within the revenues expected in the fiscal year 1936.

Let me put it another way: The excess of expenditures over receipts during this fiscal year amounts to over $7,000,000,000. My estimates for the coming fiscal year show an excess of expenditures over receipts of $2,000,000,000. We should plan to have a definitely balanced budget for the third year of recovery and from that time on seek a continuing reduction of the national debt.

This excess of expenditures over revenues amounting to over $9,000,-000,000 during two fiscal years has been rendered necessary to bring the country to a sound condition after the unexampled crisis which we encountered last spring. It is a large amount, but the immeasurable benefits justify the cost.

The following table shows expenditures and receipts for the fiscal years 1934 and 1935 as contained in the budget, plus the additional expenditures which will be made out of additional authorizations and appropriations here recommended. It shows, also, the estimated increase in the public debt and the book value of assets held as security against loans:

[1] Receipts for the temporary revenue provisions of the National Industrial Recovery Act are estimated for the periods prior to their termination following the proclamation on December 5, 1933, of repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

[2] The total amounts owing to the United States on account of obligations of foreign governments are $328,000,000 and $325,-000,000 for the fiscal years 1934 and 1935, respectively. To the extent that receipts from foreign governments exceed amounts included in the estimates, there will be a corresponding increase in total receipts.

[3] Additional expenditures on these accounts for the fiscal years 1934 and 1935 are included under "Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works."

[4] The classification of general expenditures for public-building construction and sites, Treasury Department, and for War Department (nonmilitary) for the fiscal year 1934 is not available, and such expenditures for the fiscal year 1933 are therefore included in general expenditures under Treasury Department and National Defense-Army, respectively.

[5] Revised to adjust $1,112,941.82 credit in special deposit account of Farm Loan Bureau, now Farm Credit Administration.

[6] Included under Department of Commerce.

[7] Revised to adjust $8,773,569.75 for Emergency Conservation Work included in daily Treasury statements in 1933 under National Defense-Army.

[8] Exclusive of $8,773,569.75. See note 7.

[9] On and after May 27, 1933, repayments of loans made from agricultural marketing fund-Federal Farm Board, and interest thereon, are reflected as credits in the expenditures of the Farm Credit Administration.

[11] Emergency expenditures prior to the fiscal year 1934 (except Reconstruction Finance Corporation) are included in general expenditures, the classification of which emergency expenditures is not available for comparison with emergency expenditures for the fiscal year 1934. Therefore, neither the totals of general expenditures nor the totals of emergency expenditures for the fiscal year 1934 are comparable with the totals for prior fiscal years.

[12] No allotment has yet been made for 1935. Estimate of expenditures is included in the figures relating to unallotted funds.

[13] The estimates of expenditures of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation are contingent on the enactment of legislation extending the corporation's authority to incur obligations to June 30, 1934. If the authority is not extended, the estimated expenditures for 1934 will be reduced by $975,000,000, and the net repayments for 1935 will be reduced by $74,000,000.

[14] Of the emergency expenditures made up to and including the fiscal year 1935, it is roughly estimated that $2,500,000,000 of repayments to loans that will be repaid to the Government during the fiscal year 1936 and subsequent years, which repayments will be available for reduction of the public debt.

[15] Total expenditures and excess of expenditures for the fiscal year 1933 include expenditures made by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, whereas total expenditures in previously published statements for 1933 did not include Reconstruction Finance Corporation expenditures.

[16] The increase in the debt for 1933 included an increase of $445,008,042.44 in the general fund balance.

The budget estimates of appropriations for 1935, exclusive of Agricultural Adjustment Administration benefit payments and refunds of processing taxes, but inclusive of all other appropriations for regular departments and independent establishments, including interest on the debt and debt retirement, are $2,980,293,833.60. When compared with budget estimates of appropriations transmitted in the budget for 1934 they show a reduction of $684,913,167.

A tabular comparative summary of expenditures and receipts and of the expenditures of the Farm Credit Administration, classified according to general and emergency items and listed by departments and under other general heads, appears in budget statement No. 1, table B, of receipts, estimates, appropriations and expenditures, classified according to general and emergency items and listed by departments and under other general heads, appears in budget statement No. 1, table B, of receipts, estimates, appropriations.

The estimates of receipts take no account of the additional revenue which may be obtained from an increase in liquor taxes and from the proposed changes in the income tax law. Since neither of these tax measures has come before Congress as yet, no accurate estimate can be made of their yield. However, if as proposed by the Committee of Ways and Means, the tax on distilled spirits is increased from $1.10 a gallon to $2 a gallon, and the rates of tax on wines are also increased, the estimated revenue would be increased by approximately $50,000,000, assuming that consumption is not affected by additional gallonage taxes imposed by the States. Considerable additional revenue can also be secured from administrative changes in the income tax law, which may amount to as much as $150,000,000 for a full year.

The estimates for the Postoffice Department are predicated upon a continuation of the 3 cent postal rate for nonlocal mail. It is highly important that this rate be continued. I recommend its continuance.

The estimates of appropriations submitted in the budget are predicated on the continuation of certain economy legislative provisions which I ask to be enacted and which are appended hereto. The most important is that having to do with reduction of compensation of Federal employes. It is eminently fair that, the cost of living having fallen as compared with 1928, the employes of the Government sustain some reduction in compensation. This is not inconsistent with our policy of advocating an increase in wages in industry. For wages there had fallen far beyond any reduction contemplated for Federal employes and in most grades are even now substantially below compensation paid Federal employes under the maximum reduction of 15 per cent.

Among the legislative provisions appended hereto is one prohibiting automatic increases in compensation except in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps. The personnel of these three services are engaged in a life service to their country. Some, by reason of the pay freezes, have sustained reduction in compensation of more than 25 per cent. They are, therefore, in a different category from those in other governmental agencies. They should, in 1935, be released from the restrictions on automatic increases in compensation.

Puts Emergency Expenditures Under Comptroller General.

Up to now there has been no coordinated control over emergency expenditures. Today, by Executive order, I have imposed that necessary control in the Bureau of the Budget.

Heretofore, emergency expenditures have not been subject to audit by the Comptroller General of the General Accounting Office. Today I am, by Executive order, reposing in him the authority to conduct such an audit and to continue to audit each such expenditure. Hereafter, therefore, just as in the departmental expenditures, there will be, in emergency expenditures, a prebudget and a postaudit.

By reason of the fact that the Bureau of the Budget has had no control in the past over the various expenditures, obligations and allotments made by the emergency organizations, the task of preparing the present budget has been the most difficult one since the budget and accounting act went into effect in 1921. These difficulties, in future years, will be substantially minimized by the control which I have established.

Government Credit Called Cornerstone of Recovery.

It is evident to me, as I am sure it is evident to you, that powerful forces for recovery exist. It is by laying a foundation of confidence in the present faith in the future that the upturn which we have so far seen will become cumulative. The cornerstone of this foundation is the good credit of the Government.

It is, therefore, not strange nor is it academic that this credit has a profound effect upon the confidence so necessary to permit the new recovery to develop into maturity.

If we maintain the course I have outlined, we can confidently look forward to cumulative beneficial forces represented by increased volume of business, more general profit, greater employment, a diminution of relief expenditures, larger governmental receipts and repayments, and greater human happiness.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

January 4, 1934.

The decrease for the Senate resulted from a $94,455 reduction for expenses of investigations. The increase for the House was due largely to $43,700 more for mileage of members and $91,500 for contingent expenses, offset in part by a $36,665 decrease for clerk hire.

Capitol Architect Gets Increase.

Although the budget for the Architect of the Capitol was $220,-721 less, due to a nonrecurring construction item, he was given increased amounts for repairs and maintenance, including $27,807 for the Capitol power plant. The increase for the Botanic Garden was attributed to small increases in salary item. Of the Library of Congress increase, $23,569 was for salaries and $30,000 for purchase of books.

An increase of $750,000 for Government Printing Office printing and binding expenses was partially offset by decreases of $20,388 and $10,-800, respectively, for salaries and general expenses. This agency, however, will have $281,188 less available in 1935, due to a special exemption in the Economy Act.

Despite the large decrease, $1,937,-990 was added to the department's salary item to cover restoration of one-third of the pay cut. Included in salaries was $10,000 for an Undersecretary of Agriculture, a new position.

The decrease in Office of Experiment Stations represented a 25 per cent cut in Federal aid to States. There also was a reduction of $1,-018,000 in the State aid grants of the extension service and a reduction of $486,082 for farmers' cooperative demonstration work.

The reduction in the Bureau of Animal Industry included $91,141 for eradication of scabies in cattle and sheep, $300,000 for indemnities to owners of condemned tubercular cattle and $155,000 for eradication of cattle tick—reductions attributed to the progress made in this work.

The Bureau of Plant Industry's budget was decreased by $58,210 for cereal crops and diseases, $208,914 for crop reduction investigations, $35,588 for forest pathology inquiries, $51,913 for sugar plant investigations and $78,156 for inquiries into Western irrigation projects.

The Forest Service was cut $441,-184 for administration and protection of National forests, the PWA taking over this work. The decreases in the estimates for the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils resulted from a curtailing of investigation and development of insecticides, fungicides and fertilizers.

The reduction of $824,511 in the estimates for the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine will result in a general curtailment of that agency's work in seeking to control insects.

In the Bureau of Biological Survey's estimate there was a decrease of $207,265 for the control of rodents, $39,699 for the protection of migratory birds and $7,512 for enforcement of the migratory bird conservation act.

The increase of $4,003,695 in the Bureau of Public Roads will be used to cover current accounts submitted by the States, but it does not increase the amount authorized for Federal aid. The fund for agricultural engineering investigation in agency of that name was decreased $96,863.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics was cut $69,630 for agricultural finance studies and $23,150 for gathering market information. Another decrease of $25,255 was made in the Bureau of Home Economics for investigations and experiments.

Bookkeeping Setup Changed.

The $4,527,801 decrease in miscellaneous items had to do with the bookkeeping arrangement for forest roads and trails.

The permanent appropriation of $831,022,428 for the AAA will be used for payment of crop reduction benefits in anticipation of revenues from processing taxes.

The United States Employment Service takes the place of the old Labor Department Employment Service, wiping off $181,000 in one place, but adding $2,232,585 for the new service. The slight increase for the United States Housing Corporation is for additional travel.

The Navy Department will have a total of $315,691,521 on the basis of this estimate for expenditure during the 1935 fiscal year due to unexpended balances. Partial restoration of the pay cut adds $10,500 to the salary account whereas repeal of the economy provisions prohibiting automatic increases in compensation of military personnel will add $3,000,000 more. This budget provides for an increase in Navy personnel from 79,700 to 82,500 men, involving an increase of $2,000,000.

It is also proposed to increase the Marine Corps from 15,444 to 16,000 men at an added cost of $700,000.

Another $700,000 increase was included to pay naval medical officers now attached to the CCC and paid by that agency.

Expansion of naval and Marine Corps reserve programs will cost an additional $600,000. An increase of $2,500,000 was asked for the retirement fund. Due to an enlarged operating force plan, the Navy asked for an increase of $1,000,000 for fuel.

The Bureau of Ordnance asked for $1,700,000 additional to replace, overhaul and repair guns, torpedoes and other ordnance details. Another increase of $245,000 was asked by the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, to replace medical supplies.

| Balance payable from the general fund | 92,014,240.00 | +22,419,211.00 |

The estimate for postal revenues was predicated on a continuation of 3 cent postal rate for nonlocal first-class mail. Part of the postal deficit of $92,014,240 was attributed to the transfer of practically all of the public buildings outside of the District of Columbia from the Treasury to the Postoffice Department, placing on the latter the expense of operating and maintaining them.

Modification of the pay cut will cost this department $26,000,000 additional.

Transportation expenses were reduced in the budget $258,000, exclusive of the ocean and air mail subsides. For the latter, $42,250,000 was asked, an increase of $500,000 over the current year's appropriation. The steamship subsidy was left unchanged at $28,000,000, while the aircraft subsidy was increased from $13,750,000 to $14,250,000.

The Postoffice Department reported it would need $63,000,000 in excess of its estimates if certain provisions of the economy act are repealed.

The largest decrease was $367,523, for which appropriations were not requested for 1935, such as the Montevideo conference, the London economic conference and the general disarmament conference. The foreign service retirement and disability fund was reduced from $292,700 to $159,100, due to legislative provisions.

Other savings were effected in the usual contributions of various international agencies.

The cost of restoring one-third of the pay cut to this department will be $4,428,100. Another increase asked was $85,670 for additional personnel and traveling expenses for the office of the Secretary. The item for the office of the Solicitor was transferred from the Justice Department by last June's executive order.

Other Sums Requested.

The Division of Supply asked $25,000 more for printing and binding. Commissioner of Accounts and Deposits asked for an increase of $17,260, principally for additional personnel. The increase in the Division of Bookeeping and Warrants included $65,000 additional for recoinage of minor coins, and $33,000 contingent expenses in connection with the handling of public moneys.

The Bureau of Customs increase is due chiefely to partial restoration of the pay cut. The increase for the Treasurer was attributed to the need for additional personnel. On the other hand the Internal Revenue Bureau saved $7,033,900 through reducing personnel and in the estimated amount required frr refunds.

Due to prohibition repeal the budget for the Bureau of Industrial Alcohol was increased $1,380,460, chiefly for additional employes.

The narcotics bureau asked an additional $142,945 for more agents and related expenses.

The Coast Guard budget decreased $2,077,550, due largely to curtailed rum-running activity, the principal items of decrease being $395,400 for pay and allowances, $240,400 for fuel and water, $351,943 for outfits, $129,470 for rebuilding and repairing stations, and $355,438 for repairs to vessels.

The increase for the public health service included $50,000 in salaries for acting assistant surgeons, $462,495 for mental hygiene, chiefly to cover cost of equipment for the Lexington, Ky., narcotic farm, and $35,000 for salaries and maintenance at hospitals.

The most important decrease in the Supervising Architect's budget was $71,000,000 for construction of public buildings. Other decreases for the Supervising Architect were $3,264,000 for miscelleanous public building projects, $500,000 for rent of temporary quarters, $1,650,000 for general expenses, $1,900,000 for outside professional services and $245,000 for salaries.

| Grand total, Executive Office and all independent establishments, except Veterans' Administration and Farm Credit Administration | 15,000.00 | —$16,000.00 |

This decrease chiefly resulted from the nonrecurrence in the new budget of the $3,300,000,000 PWA appropriation of last spring. Part of the $1,166,000,000 which President Roosevelt will seek as a deficiency appropriation for the next six months, not appearing in the 1935 estimates, will go for public works. Actually the estimates for these departments increased $1,004,442 due to the pay restoration proposal.

The slight decrease in the White House budget was due to a saving of $12,631 for miscellaneous expenses in maintenance of the mansion and grounds. This was off-set by partially a $5,000 increase in the traveling expense item.

The increase for the Civil Service Commission included $393,000 for salaries, of which $200,000 may be used in the 1934 fiscal year. This was necessary to enable the commission to carry on its examination program and to meet additional work resulting from the recovery program.

Growing compensation benefits made necessary the increase for the Employees' Compensation Commission. The decrease for the Federal Home Loan Board resulted from a nonrecurring item for savings and loan promotion. Of the increase for the Federal Power Commission it is proposed that $20,000 be made immediately available to employ additional accounting and legal assistants and to eliminate the necessity of administrative furloughs. It is proposed to establish 10 new positions, including an attorney, 2 attorney examiners, 3 accountants and 4 clerk stenographers.

The decrease in the Federal Reserve Board resulted from legislation transferring its cost of operations from the Treasury to banks affiliated with it. Discontinuation of the general railroad contingent fund explains the $500,000 decrease for the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The PWA has allocated out of its existing appropriation $714,808,851 for Federal projects to other departments, thus lightening the expenses of those agencies as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Agriculture | $56,114,747 |
| Commerce | 9,042,180 |
| Justice | 1,254,512 |
| Labor | 1,942,980 |
| Postoffice | 7,600 |
| State | 1,961,000 |
| Interior | 196,750,133 |

| Annual appropriations: | | |
| Administration, medical, hospital and domiciliary services | $76,849,907.00 | —$914,707.00 |

| Grand total, Veterans' Administration | $621,350,091.00 | —$9,133,029.00 |

Aside from an increase of $3,261,896 in the salary item due to pay restoration this agency had a decrease of $12,394,927. Of this sum $4,023,697 was for administration of hospitals and domiciliary services.

There are 544 additional hospital beds, however, provided for 1935 over the current fiscal year.

The decrease in the pensions item is occassioned principally by the advancing age and increasing death rate among Civil War veterans and their dependents and reflects the final determination by special review boards of the eligibility of presumptive cases remaining on the compensation rolls.

In addition to these estimates of appropriations for the regular departments and independent agencies, the budget for 1935 recommends the sum of $525,763,850 as the sinking fund on the public debt, an increase of $37,392,350 over the current year. Provision also is made for $824,349,000 for interest on the public debt, an increase of $82,349,000 over this year.

†Plus 3,000,000 contract authorization.

Of the large increase in this department partial restoration of the pay cut accounted for $10,492,580. In addition, it was estimated repeal of the provision forbidding automatic pay increases to promoted officers will require an additional $4,234,835. Other sizable increases were $2,091,828 due to increased cost or Army rations, $560,697 for increased cost of forage for animals and depletion of stocks and $918,667 additional for clothing and equipage made necessary by depletion of stocks. The estimate for Army transportation showed a $858,135 increase.

The Signal Corps was granted $345,899 increase, exclusive of pay restoration, to cover deferred repairs and purchase of equipment. The $9,600,707 increase in the Air Corps resulted, it was explained, from an abnormally low appropriation for the current year. In addition to the $7,500,000 allotted the Amy for planes by PWA, the $3,000,000 contract authorization was granted the corps for new planes.

The increase for the Ordnance Department was ear-marked for procurement of new ammunition. The $356,685 increase for the National Guard Bureau will be used for increasing annual encampments and drills. The increase for the Organized Reserves likewise will permit additional training. Rations costs and replenishment of depleted stocks will absorb the increase for the Reserve Officers' Training Corps.

Engineer Corps.

The estimate under nonmilitary items for the Engineer Corps will provide $29,985,359 for maintenance and improvement of existing river and harbor works, $9,746,880 for flood control on the Mississippi River, $95,000 for flood control on the Sacramento River, and $341,373 for emergency flood control on the tributaries of the Mississippi. The PWA has allotted funds for new construction work.

The decrease in the estimate for the Panama Canal resulted from deferment of improvements which can be postponed without impairing efficient operation.

The Once-Over

By H. I. Phillips.

CALENDAR FOR 1934.

JANUARY brings the snow,
Congress, speeches, auto show,
Bullish markets, sleds and skis,
Frozen pipes and prophecies.

FEBRUARY brings the thaw,
Tax proposals rather raw,
Everything but Howard Scott.

MARCH brings in the bitter gale
And the most depressing mail;
Loopholes in the law we study;
People call their lawyer "Buddy."

APRIL brings the weather fickle—
Gold quotations up a nickel;
Budgets make the people fidget—
J. P. Morgan holds a midget.

MAY brings in the yacht and tender—
Rich men groom a cup defender;
Beer now shows a vast improvement.
Brokers fan an upward movement.

JUNE'S the gentle month of roses,
Baseball dope from Jawn McGraw.

By JULY we should be knowing
Whither we may all be going—
Whether NRA'S a fizzle,
Whether we again may chisel.

AUGUST sees the big yacht races
And the old familiar faces;
Vanderbilt and all his buddies
In the latest news-reel studies.

In SEPTEMBER come the breezes,
Pollen, hay and tears and sneezes. . . .
(Only three more months for guessing
If Blue Eagles are a blessing.)

Comes OCTOBER down the valley
With a little market rally—
Comes the G. O. P. assailing
Roosevelt as unavailing.

Raccoon coats come in NOVEMBER,
Bringing eggs who can remember
Back when it was not good cricket
To tear up a big game ticket.

Last comes old DECEMBER roughly
And the query from us gruffly—
"Lissen, old year, spent and frowsy,
What's your record? Good or lousy?

THE LAST RESORT.

Congress is back on the job. No other way could be found to block recovery and rising confidence.

The football rules committee now proposes moving the goal posts again. A few years ago it moved them back from the goal line. Now it wants them moved back where they were. It seems that no matter where they put them, the old grads from the victorious college will find them.

The King and Queen of Siam are returning to America for a second visit. Since they were here last our white elephant crop has doubled and trebled.

$675,000 for Calvert Bridge.

Appropriation of $675,000 for completion of the Calvert Street Bridge across Rock Creek is the most important single item in the estimates for the highway department.

Although comparison of the appropriation for the current year and the estimates for next year show at first glance an increase of $765,190 for highway improvements, analysis shows something of a decrease.

Unless additional funds are provided by the Public Works Administration, or some other source, there will be no important new paving projects next year, according to those in charge of the highway work. Work will be confined to maintenance and reclamation.

Contract for the last of the projects for which funds were granted by the Public Works Administration this year was let on Wednesday. The administration allotment was $1,918,000. This was in addition to the $1,801,900 carried in the appropriation act and the $1,158,640 which the Director of the Budget permitted to be spent.

Construction Net Reduced.

Transfer of salaries of the entire highway department to the gasoline tax revenues has served to reduce the net sum available for actual highway construction. The salaries in the past were paid out of the general funds of the District and the gasoline tax revenues were reserved for actual work on streets. No specific street projects are carried in the budget for next year.

The Commissioners are authorized to purchase an asphalt plant at a cost not to exceed $30,000, which would be taken out of $750,000 provided for continuing current work on streets. Purchase of a municipal plant has been urged as a means of saving money on the many small repair and resurfacing jobs which are done during the year.

Appropriations for sewers were cut from the $705,000 appropriated this year to $653,740. But this decrease, the Budget Bureau explained, was only apparent and was due to continuing available next year an unexpended balance of approximately $100,000 from the assessment and permit appropriation for the current year. An allotment of $1,759,500 was made the sewer department from the Federal recovery funds this year.

No Fund for Incinerator.

No part of the funds proposed for collection and disposal of refuse shall be used for operation of a high temperature incinerator in the southeast section of the city, it was provided. The total provided for the refuse department was $1,353,100 as compared with $1,295,000 appropriated this year. The increase represented the amount required to restore one-third of the pay cut. Other items were kept at the same figure. Of the total $383,800 was for street cleaning and $832,400 for the collection and disposal of garbage and other refuse.

Purchase of three new hose wagons and one pumping engine at a cost not to exceed $30,000 is authorized in the estimate for the Fire Department. These total $2,064,775, as compared with $1,935,794 carried in the current law. Of the total, $1,894,500 is for salaries for officers and men and $5,058 for clercal help, $20,000 for repairs to buildings and grounds and $42,217 for repair of apparatus and $21,000 for fuel.

Authority is granted the District Commissioners to reduce present water charges by not more than 25 per cent and to increase the metered allotment for which the minimum charge is made from 7,500 to 10,000 cubic feet. The current law permits a 10 per cent discount for payment of bills within 15 days after they are rendered.

East Bank Gets Mains.

Victory for residents on the eastern side of the Anacostia River, who have fought for several years to get increased water supply, was written into the Water Department estimates, which included $59,000 for construction of 8,200 feet of 20-inch main in Nichols avenue from First street to Blue Plains, and $42,000 for 3,000 feet of 30-inch main from a 30-inch main in Pennsylvania avenue to Eighteenth street and Minnesota avenue.

Other mains provided for include 7,500 feet of 16-inch main in Rock Creek Church road northwest from Upshur street to Harewood road and south in Harewood road to Michigan avenue, $46,000; 3,100 feet of 20-inch main from Thirty-third place and Woodley road northwest to Connecticut avenue, in the vicinity of Macomb street, $25,000.

A total of $1,511,347 is provided for the water service, a decrease compared with the $1,027,000 carried in the appropriation act and $635,000 additional made available out of the surplus water revenues.

Extension of the water meter system is forecast in an item of $85,500 for purchase and installation of them in residences and business places not required to have them installed. Other items include $117,900 for replacement of old mains and divide valves in various sections; $213,750 for extension of mains under the assessment system; $323,950 for maintenance of the distribution system and $420,624 for the operation and maintenance of the aqueducts, reservoirs and pumping stations.

The sum of $1,381,180.94 is provided for public parks and buildings. Of this amount $564,307.94 is to go to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. Most of this amount, $531,211.94, represents the balance the District owes the commission, which advanced $3,531,211.94 for the purchase of park and playground lands, under a 1930 law. The District has repaid this at the rate of $1,000,000 a year heretofore.

Salaries for those having to do with public parks, which are under jurisdiction of the Interior Department, amount to $314,880; while $340,543 is allowed for the maintenance and improvement and $153,450 for salaries of the United States Park Police force.

Full salaries for judges of the District Supreme Court and Court of Appeals is provided for in accordance with the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court, the Budget Bureau explained. A total of $747,810 is estimated for courts and prisons, as compared with $696,893 appropriated this year.

Courts About Same.

Amounts provided for the several courts, together with the amounts appropriated for them in the current act, are: Juvenile Court, $56,813, compared with $53,675; Police Court, $120,000, compared with $114,920; Municipal Court, $75,166, compared with $69,750; Supreme Court, salaries, $129,380, compared with $112,000; juror and witness fees, $85,000; pay of bailiffs, $33,740; probation system, $10,582; pay of courthouse employes, $31,761, compared with $30,000 this year; salaries and expenses of the Court of Appeals, $95,202, compared with $83,

It Looks Like A Lipstick—It's a Lighter

And It Lights Your Cigarette, But There's No Flame, Just a Glow.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

The wind-proof cigarette lighters which are coming into such popular favor are a long way from the first awkward mechanisms which appeared on the scene some years ago. We thought the earlier ones were wonderful, despite their bulky size, inaptitude for lighting, and aptitude for spilling.

This newest model we more or less take for granted. We recognize it as the most advanced light, but surrounded as we are with constant improvements in all lines we fail to marvel at this small contraption, looking for all the world like a lipstick, which appears to be heatless, yet which becomes quite hot when we press our cigarette against it and puff.

The mystery lies in the fluid which is poured on to an inside spongy substance. This heats up with air pressure, resulting from the puffs on the cigarette.

When we entered the shop the proprietor wanted to know if we'd seen Zoo-Zoo. We explained we didn't think we had, but who was Zoo-Zoo?

It seemed that Zoo-Zoo was the king of animal jewelry.

And animal jewelry?

The proprietor led us to the showcase and pointed to some of the queerest looking objects we had ever seen.

One was obviously what had been a formal dress comb. Its fanlike end was heavily incrusted with crystal beads narrowing down into a slender neck with a small ivory bead at the end serving as the head. Small pearls strung onto a stiff wire were the legs. Tiny silver feet were firmly fastened to a small marble stand.

We were intrigued with the odd appearance of the monster and curious as to its purpose.

The proprietor himself looked a bit puzzled when we asked, whereupon every one suggested some possible use. An ornament for an evening dress. A toy for baby. A booby prize. A curio for a French cabinet. No two people agreed. Drop by and see what you'd suggest.

A card table, both exceptionally heavy and exceptionally durable, is being featured this week in a downtown store. It was so designed that when one leg pulls out the others automatically follow. A thick wooden top is overlaid with a leather cover which is proof against both water and alcohol.

Households where much bridge is played will find that a table guaranteed against time and hard usage will be an economical investment in the long run.

Lots of us hang onto snapshots because of a certain sentimental value attached to them. We allow ourselves to become blinded to the fact that they ruin the looks of our dressing table. Besides that, we are apt to forget that snapshots left exposed too long turn yellow and fade. The crisp paper on which they're printed curls up at the corners and often breaks off, marring the whole picture.

For all these reasons we should look with favor on the attractive mosaic snapshot frames displayed in a large department store. These are so pretty and colorful in themselves that they'd be a distinct ornament to our dressing table and a decided attribute to the photos.

Greta Garbo has a happy way of hitting on something terrifically unusual in the way of wearing apparel, and of putting it over with a bang. And even though none of us make claims to the Garboish so and so, we don't mind admitting we rather like to try her styles. If they can do thus and so for her, they should do this and that for us.

An F street shop has a new collar, the duplicate of one worn by Garbo in "Christina." A creamy satin neckpiece falls in soft points on either side of a coarse lace jabot The in-woven roses are outlined with thin golden threads which give a metallic appearance to the white lace.

When we turn our minds to gifts for youngsters, the first thing we think of is toys. It's not every parent who remembers that back in the days of kiddie cars and socks she thought it was a real treat to receive something "grown-uppish." But isn't it so? Didn't we just revel when wise Uncle Timothy presented us with a ring, or a bracelet? And it's ever and ever so true that almost any little girl in town would be really thrilled with a real piece of jewelry, a locket, for instance.

Among the imports which recently arrived at a downtown store are some children's lockets, perfectly delightful trinklets. One of them has the miniature of the fluffiest, purriest kitten on the back of it. Another has an exquisitely painted wreath of roses.

Shanghai's Perpetual Smile Is Blithe, But It Rubs Off Easily

Superb Pose of Gayety Hides Jitters, D. C. Visitor Recounts.

By Frances Mangum.

Shanghai, a city of glamour and glitter, where tinseled elegance covers mystery, intrigue and crime!

"Paris in all its glory is not to be compared with it!" declared Miss Rose Burgat yesterday as she sat in her Hotel Mayflower room and told of her last year and a half in Shanghai. She is in Washington on her way home to her native Switzerland from the Orient.

"A city of 3,500,000 population, Shanghai has only 50,000 white persons," she said. "An extremely small percentage of these are representative of the highest international society. The others—just driftwood.

"Placed in a city of this kind where bright lights blind the unknowing and shadows cover hidden menaces, this small group of educated and cultured people are dependent on their own small clique for amusement and diversion.

Unending Social Whirl.

"The result is dazzling! Night after night, in the hot damp summer, or cold bleak winter, there is a succession of fetes. The whole scene resembles a great bazaar. Women in gorgeous gowns and glistening jewelry; men who have made the world their playground; the highest, most frantic pitch of jazz; the clink of champagne glasses. And always somewhere in the distance, strange, weird, Oriental noises.

"Here in Shanghai money is thrown to the winds! People crave superlatives, always the best, the very best, of everything!

"But," Miss Burgat continued, "those who know, those who have lived in Shanghai and felt its uneven pulse-beat realize that all this scintillation is merely an outward cover to combat the sadness of many hearts.

"Many have come here to forget—something . Many have been sent by their governments. Some have came to wrest a fortune from this strange, siren city. It is they who realize that the great gayety is a false note ringing loudly, maddeningly. But they continue, as do we all, to participate in the futile fight for more and more diversion.

Empty Glamor.

"Life there often reminded me of a brilliant mirror ball, reflecting a thousand lights—but hollow at the core!"

Miss Burgat studied many aspects of life in this strange city.

"There are 640 night clubs," she said, "and all of them beyond the pale. They are never visited by women of the upper social strata except out of curiosity. And then the lady is carefully escorted by a group of distinguished gentlemen who sometimes take along a 'protective' guide.

"Some of these clubs are Chinese—exotic, Oriental places, where opium dens are hidden behind beaded curtains and heavy gold and silver drapes. Dancers trained from infancy to perform the strange gestures and movements characteristic of Chinese dancing excite the onlookers to more drinks, louder and rougher merriment.

"Almost without exception American music is played in these places by Chinese bands.

Russian Expatriates.

"There are many European clubs, too, where Russian girls receive as hostesses, act as partners to whomsoever pays the price, and entertain with striking dance exhibitions. Some years ago after the Russian revolution, 20,000 girls made their way to Shanghai. Many of them were gifted members of the Russian ballet.

"Some of the clubs are amazingly cheap. But on the other hand, there are some which it costs a small fortune even to enter.

"It is interesting to watch the people here. From all corners of the world come strange individuals, pursued, or pursuing. Many of them are not accepted in the social circles of the city and must frequent places of this sort to contact even a blatant kind of festivity.

"A strange city, Shanghai. A city made up of strange personalities. The brightest, gayest, darkest, saddest city in all the world!"

Miss Rose Burgat, on her way home to Switzerland from the Orient, stopped off at Washington to compare notes. The Capital is beautiful, she finds, and so is Paris—but Shanghai is the most glamorous city in the whole world.

Britain's "Wizard" Likes Our Bread

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—The "wizard baker of England," John James Nathaniel Mackman, toyed fondly with one of the 6,000 medals he has won and announced tonight that a good loaf of bread is like a work of art—a thing of personality.

The machine age is all right in its place, he said, but the making of a loaf of bread still requires a personal touch, especially in the kneading, "so it will become imbued with the personality of its creator."

Mackman is in the United States taking a busman's holiday," as he put it, visiting bakeries. The man who taught the Greeks to put currants in their bread and thereby become a chevalier of the Order of Phoenix, has tasted American bread and found it "very good," although entirely different from the English product.

Men's New Lightweight Suits for Tropics Are Forecast of Styles Here Next Summer

New York, Jan. 4.—If you're one of America's men-in-luck to whom winter is just another word for sunshine and tropical palms, you ought to know a few things about keeping yourself cool, comfortable and contented in equatorial climates. Or if you take chilblains and blizzards along with your winters, you might just as well pick up these good tips on what you'll be wearing in a few more moons.

Down under where it's hot, you don't look twice to discover that men have gone sane and sunproof in the warm weather things they wear. Colors that belong with a tropical background. Fabrics so light that even a tropical sun can't wilt them. Practical clothes that pack more trim, good looks than anybody thought possible five years ago . . . when it was proper to perspire and suffer silently.

Heat protection point 1: More heads and faces sun-shielded by panama hats with brims of goodly practical width. Snapped down front, they protect the eyes. Light in weight and in color, they absorb less heat, go with hot climates and suntanned faces.

Heat protection point 2: The word has gone around that the porousness, light weight and good looks of the oxford shirt make it top form for Southern wearing. The soft collar-attached kind, of course, and many of them now button-toned-down collars.

Heat comfort-and-protection point 3: Sport jacket-and-trouser outfits are all over the place. Just about every other man seen is wearing a flannel, tweed or gabardine coat with odd trousers. And you take your pick between brown or blue flannel coats. Worn either with white flannels . . . or with fine-striped cord or serge trousers. Or washable cottons.

Light Colored Socks, Footwear

On the cruises and at resorts, it's white socks with clocks and pastel shade socks—blues, grays, tans on most feet. In silks, lisles and, though you might not believe it, many of them white wool. And still more men have gone for mesh socks.

A bootblack might starve in these tropic resorts . . . for want of a pair of black shoes. Because every second pair, nearly, is all-white. And the others are pretty certain to be white-with-brown or white-with-black.

You couldn't complete a resort-and-cruise picture without linen suits—still on top of the popularity pile. But it's remarkable how crisp and fresh-looking many men now appear in the new lightweight worsteds in light colors. And in stripes, checks and plaids that a few years back weren't even thought possible in lightweight construction materials.

Incidentally, and importantly, no more wrinkles . . . nor bulges nor creases, such as always advertised a lightweight suit wearer years back. But in their place, suits with a snap and a flare that makes their wearers look and feel at ease from sun-up to sun-up. You'll see them coming North later.

What Today Means

"Capricorn."

If January 5 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7 to 9:15 a. m., from 10:30 to 11:45 a. m. and from 4 to 7 p. m. The danger periods are from 1:30 to 3 p. m., from 7:45 to 9 p. m. and from 11 p. m. to 1 a. m.

If you were born on January 5, you will find yourself tempted to join in a very controversial conversation during the day. It will be advisable for you to refrain from entering into any sort of an argument, and if you are wise enough not to offer your opinion, you may be saved a good deal of embarrassment. This date is not propitious for you to indulge in any sort of gossip, nor will it be advisable for you to express any kind of personal criticism about a relative or friend, for if you do, it may involve you in a very unpleasant situation.

The child born on this date will need a great deal of love, for it will possess a supersensitive nature. As it grows older its inherent tendency to be of a bashful disposition will many times be misconstrued as being backward, but this will not be true, for the child will possess an alert and retentive mind. It will be wise for you to remember this characteristic of the child, so, if later on, its teacher should not understand the child's disposition, you will be able to explain that timidity is the only thing that has to be overcome.

If January 5 is your birthday and you are a man, you are inclined to be very dominating and you will make yourself unpopular with your employes or employers unless you rectify this fault. You have some very fine traits of character and a strong personality. You will eventually be regarded as unusually fitted for executive positions. It is possible you exercise a little too much reticence. Be more willing to enter into the spirit of the "kidding" in spite of the fact you do not like it, to which, every once in a while, you will be subjected. You will be gratified to see how your popularity will increase.

Women born on January 5 are inclined to take their household duties too seriously. If you will learn to relax and indulge more in innocent pleasures, such as the theater and the moving pictures, even more personal shopping expeditions, you will find yourself greatly benefited mentally as well as physically and life will appear well worth living. Both men as well as women born on January 5 have much to be grateful for as they usually, due to being very conservative and economical, will find their every need amply provided for. The future will provide you with most everything you earnestly desire if you will be wise enough not to let anyone persuade you to engage in speculative enterprises.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

The man who is tempted to use a radium water as a rejuvenator has three reasons for resisting the temptation. The first is that the water is a humbug and contains practically no radium. In that event the only harm done is the loss of money and the acquirement of a reputation. Money is hard to get in this period of depression and a reputation for buying gold bricks does not commend a man.

The second is the possibility that the preparation contains enough radium to be harmful. In that event he may lose his life, as happened with one well-known man and with others not so well known.

The third reason is that even when radium is present in definite therapeutic doses, as shown by proper tests, the use of the preparation will do no good. Dr. R. R. Evans, who has made a thorough study of the subject, says that radium scientifically given by hypodermic or intravenous injection, or by mouth, acts on the blood-making organs and, up to a certain point, causes new blood cells to be made and brings about a sense of well-being. This feeling of well-being is temporary and superficial and the good effects on the blood are speedily lost. Pushed a little further, or continued a little longer, the effects on the blood become bad.

This applies to every method of using radium except its surgical use and the use of radium needles and seeds for the removal of cancers. It also applies, though in different degrees, to mesothorium, radon, and a score of radium substances, some of which are known by the names of other elements. However, it does not apply to lead, which is nothing more than the end product, so far as we know, of radium decomposition; nor to helium, which is another degeneration product down near the bottom of the list. It does not apply to the ordinary bath waters, such as those of hot springs, because of the small quantity of the substance they contain and the form in which it is there.

The symptoms of radium poisoning are inflammation of the gums and mouth generally, death of jawbone and other bones, osteomyelitis, soft spots in bones, easily broken bones and a form of pernicious anemia.

Several methods of treatment give promise of helping the body throw off stored radium. All of these turn on the uses of lime by the body.

The Family Marketer

A Fisherman Tells How Winter Cold Affects His Market.

"It's been cold these last few days," said the fisherman, "so the only fish we have on the boats are the frozen ones."

"You can't get any fresh?" The Marketer wanted to know why.

"Nope, y'see we get our fish from the nets on the bay, and when the fish go out to sea, the boats have to take drag nets out. Sometimes they have to wait as many as four days to get a catch, so that the market is determined a week in advance.

"In other words, if this week is fair, we get fresh fish next, and if it isn't, we have to bring up the frozen."

What frozen fish have you today?"

"We've trout, croakers, butterfish, and bluefish, and bass—they're all 3 pounds for a quarter. Then we have fancy dressed trout at 15 cents a pound. Shucked oysters are 40 and 50 cents a quart, and $1.25 and $1.60 a gallon. Clams are 15 cents a dozen."

"About how many pounds do you bring up?"

Light Catch of 3 Tons.

"I guess I brought about 6,000 pounds this week. That's not many—in the summer time we bring 20,000 to 25,000 pounds."

"Lord, no! She'll carry 20 ton."

"Do the nets ever bring in any odd fish?" The Marketer hoped to hear about a sea monster.

"Well, they get all kinds of small trash that are thrown away. Sometimes they get these big toads, with mouths about a foot wide. They are really funny looking. I'll bring one up for you to see the next time I find one."

If you plan to buy frozen fish, it is best to buy it frozen and thaw it at home. Do not plan to keep fish uncooked for any length of time. It spoils easily.

Because fried oysters are so good, the Marketer would like to suggest them for tonight's menu. But because fried oysters require deep fat, which is not universally used, she suggests sauteed oysters instead.

Sauteed Oysters.

Drain prepared oysters on absorbent paper; sprinkle with salt and pepper. Roll in corn meal or in fine crumbs. Cook in small quantity of hot fat in a frying pan until brown on the bottom. # Culbertson on Bridge

Reaching the Right Contract.

The lure of honors in Contract has resulted disastrously very often at the Bridge table. Players, blinded by the count for honors, oftentimes forget that "The game's the thing," and insist upon bidding suits which will yield an honor count to the point where they reach an unmakable contract, or, when they stop at a contract which can be made, find that they have surrendered a game for a paltry 100 points. The hand below is an illustration of the principle that the Responding Hand should not unduly accentuate honors but should realize that after partner's minimum response to a "One over One" takeout of one diamond his almost certain six tricks in one suit make game at notrump an extreme probability, while making game at any other declaration is an extreme improbability.

North, Dealer.

The bidding:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1♣ | Pass | 1◇ | Pass |
| 1NT | Pass | 3NT | Pass |
| Pass | Pass | | |

The problem presented in the above hand is one of bidding only. The play presents no difficulty whatever, regardless of the opening lead. Many players would bid and rebid diamonds with South's hand and probably continue the auction until an unmakable contract had been undertaken. Such a policy on the part of South is both unwise and unsound. No doubt, South would like to cash the honors, but he should not permit this to prevent the greater good to the partnership of scoring a game. Hence, when North opens the bidding with one club and South responds with one diamond, North's bid of one no-trump indicates a minimum or near-minimum hand which does not suggest the possibility of making a contract of five diamonds.

South should now respond with three notrump. With a solid suit game should be a practical certainty and South should bid it.

As I have previously said, the contract of three notrump can not be defeated, regardless of what card or suit East elects to open.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If North opens the bidding with one club, what should be South's response and what should be the final count?

West, Dealer.

Paris Designer Puts Contrast In One Color

Gown in Black, Without a Single Spangle, Still Looks Gay.

An aura of quiet, well-bred elegance surrounds the clothes created by Mainbocher. This American designer, whose Paris establishment is backed by American capital, usually ornaments his gowns by clever manipulation of the material instead of using contrasting fabrics or colors. An excellent example of this method may be seen in a Washington shop that has a copy of a Mainbocher evening gown. From deep front cowl to long slithering train this model is a study in lustrous black satin without a single rhinestone or bit of color.

And yet it has rather an elaborate and festive air about it. This is undoubtedly created by a wide band of accordion-pleated black satin which swirls across the shoulders, dips to a cowl in front, and outlines a deep V in back. Below the cowl the skirt clings to the body in suave, unbroken line. The back is closely fitted and the long train begins just below the hips in a steep point. No wonder the smartly gowned Parisienne considers black the most striking of colors, when it can create a gown as fascinating as this Mainbocher model.

Dramatic Colors.

Blackberry and fuchsia is the dramatic color scheme used for a copy of a Patou evening dress that is in a Q street shop. Blackberry crepe-backed satin makes a sheath with shallow draped neck in front and narrow crossed straps in back. The very tight skirt has a little fullness, very low-placed, consisting of a fuchsia colored godet. Fuchsia crepe-backed satin also lines the deep armholes and is twisted into the drapery at the front neckline.

Patou has the valuable faculty of creating clothes that make their wearer seem a good ten years younger than she actually is. He has designed an evening gown that is sufficiently decorous for the older woman to wear without feeling that she looks giddy. And yet it is gay enough to give her a sense of exhilaration every time she dons it.

The color is prune brown. The material is sheer crepe with bodice accents of satin. The lines are fluid with grace. A large flat bow of the satin nestles at the base of a waist-deep decolletage in back. Prune-brown satin also makes a narrow draped bertha in front and butterfly shields over the shoulder in back. The remainder of the gown is sheer crepe. A train finishes the long slim skirt.

Gowns One Can Wear.

Molyneux creates clothes that are definitely wearable. Nothing theatrical about them, but they manage to be perfectly stunning in a nice, respectable way. This last season he has made most of his evening gowns with color at the throat and chest. A Q street shop has a copy of a dress of that type. Enormous white rhododendrons with scarlet stamens are placed on the bosom of a Capri blue crepe model.

The contrast is startling. Narrow straps do their best to cover a naked back, with the assistance of a soft bow at the waist. The sculptured skirt joins the bodice in a pointed line and flairs below the knees. The fan-shaped train starts high on the sides and dips to a point in the center back. But in spite of long train, naked back, and sculptured skirt, the outstanding thing about this gown is the bunch of posies on the bosom.

A copy of another Molyneux is in a Connecticut avenue shop. This one is an afternoon dress that would be suitable for street wear. Heavy rough crepe in nancy brown clings to the figure from shoulder to knee where the skirt widens ever so slightly. Long, monkish sleeves are set in the bodice below one of the most intricate yokes that was ever devised by a couturier who is famous for that sort of thing. An amusing hood makes rather a low neck in back. The front comes right up to the chin and buttons with seven amber-colored half-moons. A narrow belt encircles the waist. This dress will be the star attraction at bridge parties or informal luncheons.

Economy in Blouses.

The vogue for blouses and skirts gives you four dresses where you formerly had two, says Betty Furness. The right skirt with the right blouse in different degrees of formality will take you to anything from a golf game to a formal dinner.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest.

Fame and Tomorrow.

Fame smiled at him and said:
"Well done, indeed, today!
A laurel for your head
And cheers along the way.
A medal for your breast,
A brief time free from sorrow,
This day you've done your best!
But what about tomorrow?"

"Tomorrow?" "Yes," said Fame,
"Tomorrow you must rise
To labor just the same;
A new goal farther lies.
Soon will these medals fade
That are your coat adorning.
Today's success is made,
But what about the morning?

"Has triumph made you vain
That you'll attempt no more?
There still are heights to gain
Harder than those before.
Safely you've struggled through
This troubled and perplexed time,
Success has smiled on you!
But what about the next time?"

Fashion's Three Musketeers Cut Capers With Precedent

Mainbocher Created the "Don't Dress" Style; Patou Applied "Molasses" to Skirt Hems; While Molyneux Smoothed Fancy Shoulders.

If the instinctive feminine love of finery is a foolish business, a great deal of the responsibility for it certainly lies with the men. For they are the ones who encourage women to dress to be beautiful. Moreover, if clothes make the woman, plenty of men make the clothes—and do so in such a manner that with them dressmaking becomes a fine art.

But the strangest trio of famous men couturiers are the three who reign supreme in Paris at present. One is French, one English, the third an American.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

A magazine editor from Chicago, a dashing officer of the Canoe Club of France, and a debonair English army captain are the present king-pins among the male dressmakers of Paris.

Mainbocher, the Chicago boy who made good in Paris, is the youngest of the triumvirate in experience. Jean Patou, Canoe Club officer, is the handsomest. Capt. Edward Molyneux from England is the most conservative and practical. Each has wielded a tremendous influence in the world of fashion.

Before he turned to dress design four years ago, Main Bocher, as he was christened in Chicago, was editor of the Paris Vogue. While occupying that position he had a good deal to say about what styles should survive in the French houses. This was good fun until the designers went temperamental a few seasons ago and decided that they would waste none of their talents upon anything that was not strictly sports, street, or evening attire.

Don't Dress Idea.

After agonizing over this situation for a year or two, Main Bocher decided to do something about it. He resigned from Vogue, secured backing for a dressmaking establishment of his own, spelled his name as one word, and proceeded to make "don't dress" frocks that were hailed with joy and thanksgiving by women in Paris and London as well as in his native Chicago.

The other designers gnashed their teeth in chagrin at the brilliant success of these semiformal costumes. As soon as they had recovered from the gnashing performance, they bowed gracefully to the inevitable and added similar gowns to their own collections. But the next time a woman slips into her flattering long dinner dress with high neck and full-length sleeves she should reverently whisper the name of Mainbocher. It is he who is responsible for the smart "don't dress" idea.

The young man from Chicago, who incidentally has a voice of grand opera timber, shows daring originality tempered with good breeding in all his creations. Some of his most famous clients are the Comtesse de Vallambrosa, Mrs. Gilbert Miller and Elsie de Wolfe (Lady Mendl).

Handsome, large sun-tanned Patou is the greatest gambler as well as the most colorful of the couturiers. He will risk an entire collection, without a single compromise, on a single idea or whim. Thus far he has been lucky in his plays with the wheel of fashion.

Pulled Our Skirts Down.

It was Patou who first exhibited sports clothes as a distinctly separate part of his showings. He was also the first to employ American girls as mannequins. And he bravely insisted upon the return of the long skirt when the other designers were whacking off their dresses just below the knees. Patou won his point. The long skirt returned, and it looks as if it were here to stay.

This couturier began designing with leather in his father's shop. Soon his supple fingers longed for a more flexible medium. They found it in glistening silks, feathery woolens, and rich velvets. Jean Patou breathlessly prepared his first collection for what he hoped was an eagerly awaiting world. He held his opening in July, 1914. A few days later the world was getting itself deliriously excited about a shooting affair at Sarajevo. It had no time for clothes by a new couturier. When it thought of clothes at all it was in the shape of uniforms for marching armies.

Patou exchanged his scissors for a gun. He fought in the war as a Zouave. When the armistice was signed he returned to Paris and reopened his establishment, achieving immediate success.

His clothes have a youthful quality about them that is especially suited to the slender, boyish American figure. Many women fondly believe that it is impossible to look more than 30 in a Patou gown. Every season he introduces a new shade bearing his name. Every season he brings forth stunning creations that are snapped up by the Dolly Sisters, Ruth Elder and a host of other celebrities.

A Clever Fellow.

A brilliant conversationalist, Jean Patou is popular with the press because he is always willing to talk and invariably has something amusing to say. He and his elaborate establishment are always interesting, gay and vivid. His openings are conducted in the manner of fashionable receptions. Notables throng the three large salons in an historic building in the narrow Rue St. Florentin, close to the famous Place de la Concorde.

The street on the night of one of Patou's openings, is crowded with elegant foreign cars. Rolls-Royce and Hispano-Suzas, whose doors open to set before the mansion magnificently clad ladies in decollete gowns and rich wraps, gentlemen in cutaways, high silk hats and evening capes.

Within, in the vast salons, graceful Louis XVI gilt furniture is tastefully arranged in a setting of rose colored walls and luxurious rose colored carpets. Buffet suppers and cocktails are served to guests who often include the royalty of Europe, while the mannequins parade through the brilliant setting. And there is a bona-fide "American bar," in a smaller room.

While Patou appeals more to society women and actresses, Capt. Molyneux is regarded as the last word by sportswomen of both hemispheres. Year after year this Englishman of French descent shows collections of impeccably smart clothes which lean more to social than to artistic distinction. British self restraint, casualness, and refinement are apparent in everything he does.

Pupil of Lucille.

Edward Molyneux was studying to become a painter when he became interested in dress design. He left art school and apprenticed himself to Lucille, the English establishment headed by Lady Duff Gordon. He had been at Lucille's 12 years when the war broke out. He promptly joined up, became a captain in the famous Duke of Wellington's Regiment, was wounded three times, and received the British Military Cross for bravery. Later the French government conferred upon him the Legion of Honor.

After the war was over he decided to open a house of his own in Paris. From the very first his success has been phenomenal. In addition to the Paris establishment he now has a salon in London.

Most of his clothes are for sports or formal evening affairs. He usually works with soft, supple materials as jersey, tweed, chiffon and crepe, and is extremely successful with furs. Molyneaux cares little or nothing about conforming to the prevailing mode and refused to have anything to do with exaggerated shoulders when they were the fashion.

He probably knows more about the mechanics of dressmaking than any other designer, as a result of his long apprenticeship in London. He personally designs every model to the most minute detail, sometimes making a sketch which is then made up in toile. Sometimes he works the other way around, taking a new material and draping it on the mannequin until the desired line is achieved.

Among those who swear by the captain are Mary Garden, Gertrude Lawrence, Elsie Ferguson, Frances Alda, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Rose Vanderbilt. Many other notables visit his quiet salon, which is decorated in cool, gray tones.

Molyneaux is well liked by society and gets about a great deal. He has the same distinguished manner and reserve that his creations bear to such good effect.

Senator's Wife Says Silence Helps Romance

Mrs. Royal S. Copeland Believes Less Talk Makes Happier Home.

Witty, amusing and companionable Frances Spalding Copeland, wife of the famous Senator Royal S. Copeland from New York, suggests a positive "don't" for wives of busy men.

"Don't ask your husband questions. That's the first and only bit of advice I ever gave my daughter-in-law," Mrs. Copeland blithely informed a Post reporter yesterday, as she expertly assorted holiday thank-you cards and supervised preparations for afternoon tea. She is at the Shoreham for the season.

"My theory is, if your husband is enthusiastic, he'll tell you what you want to know, anyway. And if he isn't, and doesn't want to tell you, you'll either annoy him by questions or force him to innocent falsehood. In the latter event you'll be twice as unhappy as if you'd just held your tongue."

Last July, Senator and Mrs. Copeland celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage, and found themselves, according to Mrs. Copeland, possibly a little more companionable than in their first courtship days.

That she is capable of quantities of it is told by her husband in an inscription penned in one of the first books he ever wrote. It says: "To Frances: In memory of endless hours of delightful silences, when we thought out much of this material."

Wife of Our Envoy to France, Here on Visit, Talks of Her Happy New Life Among French

Bond Between Our Nations Can Never Be Broken, She Says.

"The bond of friendship between the French and American people is as strong as the nations themselves. It can not be destroyed."

With conviction and feeling, Mrs. Jesse I. Strauss, wife of the American Ambassador to France, spoke those words yesterday in the course of a conversation with The Post reporter. She was in her suite at the Shoreham, where she is stopping while making a brief visit to the Capital.

"The French have always felt a great affection for the Americans, she said. "This bond of friendship was established at the beginning of our history when Lafayette fought to help the colonies gain their independence. It has endured through the conflicts arising during 100 years of growth and change. It will endure in the future.

"Everywhere we went in France we were greeted with the greatest friendliness and hospitality. I have always found the French people the soul of gracious, kindly good will. And they are spontaneous in their love of the American people.

French Fourth of July.

"On the Fourth of July we held open house at the Embassy, and more than 3,000 people came. The French observed American Independence Day with enthusiasm and sincerity."

Mrs. Strauss said that while she was sorry to leave her own country she has fallen in love with France.

"Paris is probably the most beautiful city in the world," she declared. And inseparable from the beauty of the city is the gaiety and charm of the people.

"I love to watch them on Sundays. They take their lunches and the whole family goes and spends the day in the parks. Many of them do not have much money, but they have a faculty for enjoying what they do have which Americans often lack."

Mrs. Strauss said she was amazed at the idea some people have that the new American Embassy and Chancery in Paris are gloomy, unattractive buildings.

"Why they are beautiful!" she exclaimed. They are built along the established lines of French architecture, and while they are not extravagant they are dignified and lovely. The sun streams through the windows every day it shines. I could not wish for a nicer place to live."

Americans Best Dressed.

An interesting viewpoint on French and American dress designers was advanced by Mrs. Strauss.

"The French have a definite creative ability and a 'joie de vivre,' which finds expression in their designing," she said. "But there is not a very great difference between the clothes one sees over there and those that are made here.

"French women have the reputation of being beautifully dressed. Many of them are chic. But the American woman wears her clothes better and is generally better looking than the French woman. One reason for this is that American women are more athletic and have better figures."

"Yet nowhere in the world do women play a greater part in business and politics than in France.

"Business careers are no novelty to the French woman. Long before it became the custom for women in America to have careers women in France had entered the business world.

"All of them help their husbands in their work. Often at a husband's death a wife will assume the whole responsibility of his business. I know a woman whose husband left a whole chain of newspapers. She runs them most successfully. She never misses a day at her desk, and attends all social functions too. She is charming.

"All French women have decided political views. They really study politics and understand them. They do not often take an active part in them though. They prefer to be the power behind the throne."

Mrs. Strauss smiled. "Oh I am a great admirer of France and the French people," she admitted. "In fact I love my life over there so much I am afraid I shan't want to leave when the time comes."

She Thinks American Women Best Dressed; French Best in Business.

Furniture Shown In Lively Colors

Chicago, Jan. 4 (AP).—Manufacturers exhibiting in the annual winter show of the American furniture mart pulled back the curtain on new styles in furniture today and asserted that home is going gayer in 1934.

The spotlighted style is "classic modern," as a compromise between extreme modernistic and the older styles, a little softer of line and a little less radical of shape than unmodified modernistic. Colors are still what one expert called "a bit startling."

Leather will be fashionable for upholstery, but it has some new rivals. A rubber composition and a rough cloth much like toweling are new fabrics.

Among new ideas is a "planning desk" for housewives, a business desk equipped for use in managing home affairs.

Bridesmaids Hard to Please, Says Stylist

But Mrs. Ivens Jones Loves Job of Planning Nuptial Settings.

To create the proper background of beauty for weddings is the unique life work of one matron of the Capital. And she practices her chosen profession as an artist might paint pictures or a composer invent new musical charms.

"I really believe there is an element of creative art in selecting the suitable clothes for women," said Mrs. Ivens Jones, fashion adviser and personal shopper, yesterday.

"First, to visualize the type of things a girl should wear, then to find the type, and finally see it on her, is like painting a picture.

"But brides are loveliest to paint. I have had the most enjoyable experiences buying for them. I love to work for girls, and have to buy for lots of them. You see, I have two debutante daughters, and they bring all their friends to me.

"I plan the weddings right straight through from the bride's dress up to the flowers the attendants carry. The brides themselves aren't so difficult to shop for because they have pretty definite ideas about what they want—but the bridesmaids—they're the problem!

"Sometimes a bunch of them get together in the shop—stepping on each other's toes, and sometimes on mine. They fuss about the colors; one can't wear baby blue; another looks like a sick kitten in coral pink; so it's pretty difficult for me to satisfy everybody at the same time."

"Earhart, Couturiere," Tries On Some of Her Own Designs

And She Pleases the Capital by Proving She's as Charming in a Sports Dress With Parachute Belt as She Is in a Plane.

Designing dresses is just another way of making aviation popular with the women of America—for Amelia Earhart, at least.

The famous flyer, looking utterly lovely and quite like a mannequin of some Paris dress house herself, with her short cropped curls and blue eyes, and tailored sports suit of soft, brown wool, chatted in her suite at the Willard yesterday, while she modeled her very first collection of "Amelia Earhart" gowns.

"I never design a frock that I do not see it as expressing some of the natural beauty of flying," she declared.

"For trimming I nearly always use something characteristic of aviation, a parachute cord for tie or belt, a ball-bearing belt buckle, wing bolts and nuts for buttons.

"I chose the fabric for this dress," continued Miss Earhart, picking up a vivid, red and white print, "because the figures in it reminded me of wheels. As a matter of fact, they aren't," she laughed. "They're really Chinese money. But people so seldom see that these days they probably will think these are wheels just as I did.

"As a child I never liked to sew. Later on when I used to have to make my own clothes I liked it even less.

"A couple of years ago, though, a group of women aviators got together and discussed the problem of proper wearing apparel. There were about 700 of us, and we all agreed it was almost impossible to buy the right flying clothes. Models exhibited by mannequins were all impractical. Pretty to look at—but pretty hard to fly in.

"Just fasten a parachute cord around the trousers and the whole outfit fell out of joint.

"As a result we had to buy men's aviation clothes. They were always misfits, highly unsatisfactory from the collar down. So out of the 700 women pilots we formed a club which was to be responsible for the designing and manufacture of proper apparel for women aviators.

"I was on the committee and did a lot of contact work with manufacturers. Before long I became so interested it occurred to me I'd like to go even further and design other kinds of clothes, sportswear, of course.

"I started drawing dresses first. Then I bought a dummy to experiment by draping. When my husband saw it he grimaced horribly and wanted to know if he had to live with that thing?

"I told him he surely did. He's really interested in my work, but objects to it on the grounds that it keeps me so busy. I used to think I was busy—now I know I am!"

Beautiful Women Swear by Him

There Was a Jinx on New Year for Poor George Raft

Hollywood, Jan. 4 (AP).—George Raft has made a great start on the new year—but in the wrong direction.

On New Year's Eve the actor, attending a dance, was asked to take a bow. Stepping down from the orchestra stand he turned his ankle, fracturing a small bone.

With the aid of friends he hobbled to the door, where he found that his 16-cylinder automobile had been stolen.

He called a taxicab and went home. There he found that the Los Angeles rainstorm had left 3 feet of water in his basement, no electricity and no heat.

Hines Requests Delay of Views On Veteran Aid

Policy Only Formative, He Says in Submitting His Annual Report.

(Associated Press.)

Frank T. Hines, veteran administrator, yesterday asked that judgment of the Nation's revamped veterans' relief policy be withheld.

Submitting his annual report, Hines said the policy was in the formative state as to its practical effect, and added "certainly it would seem that consideration of any major changes should be postponed until the effect is measurable."

Because of the depression, Hines said, "a changed policy of necessity had to be evolved, but it was required that the basic principles of this new policy be sound and recognize the obligations of the Government toward those men and women who had fought for it and in that service had become disabled, and toward the dependents of those who had died in the service, as well as the need of those who had served and, while not disabled in the service had subsequently become, through physical or mental disability, unable to care for themselves."

Economy Act Was Result.

Passage of the economy act was the result, he observed, together with subsequent Executive regulations issued in conformity with that legislation.

"The Veterans' Administration," he noted, "was confronted with the task of taking action in over 1,000,000 cases, with adjudicatory review in approximately 650,000 cases and the necessity for subsequent rereview in many thousands of these claims. In addition, there has been the duty of acquainting the veterans with their rights and giving the public a general understanding of the provisions of the recent law and regulations. Manifestly, imperfections and errors in a task of such magnitude were bound to arise."

The veteran population reported in domiciliary status at the end of the fiscal year was 11,187, as compared with 18,598 on June 30, 1932, a decrease of 7,411. Three-fourths of these were veterans of the World War.

Disbursements Announced.

Disbursements for all pensions during the fiscal year aggregated $234,996,328, which was $2,486,899 more than in 1932. Of this amount $148,134,072 went to veterans; $86,520,369 to widows and dependents of veterans, and $341,886 to Army nurses.

Since the establishment of the pension system in 1790, the Government has paid out $8,871,483,951.

Disbursements for disability compensation during the year amounted to $184,824,665, a decrease of $4,715,714 from 1932. Recipients numbered 336,710, 8,052 more than in 1932.

Death compensation totaled $35,582,820. This sum went to beneficiaries of 98,628 deceased veterans.

The annual net disbursements for all purposes for the year were $868,688,479.

Family Spurns Fugitive's Body

Theodore Dodson, Luray, Killed in Kansas Duel, Buried as Pauper.

A pauper's grave in Lawrence, Kans., last night held the body of Theodore Dodson, 25, youthful criminal, whose home was once in Luray, Va., and whose career was marked by an attempted attack upon a Washington girl three years ago.

Dodson, according to an Associated Press report, was slain in a pistol fight with a Kansas policeman. Authorities buried him after his father, Robert Dodson, of Luray, and his wife, of Seminole, Okla., declined to take charge of the remains.

According to dispatches from Luray, Cletus and Homer Dodson, brothers, threatened to avenge his death shortly before leaving for Kansas on a freight train.

Earlier in the day, the dispatches asserted, Cletus and Homer, with their father, rushed through the streets of Luray shouting that the youth had been "murdered."

Theodore was sentenced to 25 years in 1931 for an attempted attack on Miss Adelaide Emley, 24, of 3604 Fulton street northwest, at Skyland, a mountain summer resort. Dodson escaped from Culpeper Jail while awaiting a new trial.

Temporary Alimony Given Mrs. Mundy

Elko, Nev., Jan. 4 (AP).—Temporary alimony of $2,500 a month, to be paid during the pendency of her divorce suit at Minden, Nev., was awarded today to Mrs. Harriett Bryant Mundy, wife of the wealthy and socially prominent New York broker, Floyd Woodruff Mundy.

Mrs. Mundy charged desertion and cruelty.

California Financier's Death Laid to Robbers

Martinez, Calif., Jan. 4 (AP).—A robbery theory in the mysterious death of Julian C. Whitman, San Francisco financier, was strengthened today, investigators said, with the discovery that Whitman had cashed a $50 check before starting on a business trip into Contra Costa County last Wednesday.

His body was found the next day, with only seven cents in his pocket and his wallet missing.

Troops Formed in 1933.

A total of 31 new units, consisting of 1 Sea Scout ship, 6 cub packs and 24 Boy Scout Troops, were organized during 1933 in the District of Columbia Council, which includes the District, as well as several counties in Maryland and Virginia.

Church South; 23, Takoma American Lutheran Church; 636, Holy Comforter Episcopal Chapel; 625, Men's Society of the Covenant Church; 87, Church of our Savior (Episcopal); 61, conducted by organizations in Potomac Heights, and 99, St. Stephen's Lutheran Church.

Parents' Night Observed.

Troop 33 held its annual "At Home" for parents and others interested in Scout activities. Exhibits were sponsored by the patrols as follows: Eagle patrol, Indian lore; hawk patrol, entomology and nature; wildcat patrol, botany and conservation; pine tree patrol, archery.

The Indian lore exhibit contained arrowheads and stone implements, bows and arrows, moccasins, blankets, headdresses, Indian tepees and other articles made by the boys in connection wit hthe Indian lore merit badge.

The entomology and nature exhibit included insect collections, a collection of bird nests and equipment used in training of hawks for hunting purposes.

The botany and leaf collections are remarkably complete and can be used as references for other scouts working for botany badges.

The archery exhibit showed stages in the working of archery equipment. Bows and arrows for both hunting and target use were exhibited. Troop 33 is making archery one of its major activities.

Handicraft articles, a Mexican collection and a short-wave receiving set, the latter in charge of Don McClemon, are exhibited. Listeners-in could hear amateur code messages. Sixty guests visited the scout room.

D.C. Rum Bill Break Perils Joint Hearing

Rep. Norton Marshals Forces for Fight on Rigid Bills.

Differences sufficiently wide to result in minority reports from the House and possibly the Senate District Committees was forecast yesterday as the two committees prepared to launch joint hearings on District liquor legislation at 10 o'clock this morning in the caucus room in the old House Office Building.

One or more wets and drys on each committee have privately admitted they have no hope those disagreeing with them will consent to a satisfactory measure. The division is especially sharp in the House committee, and the fight is almost ceratin to be carried to the floor.

Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, committee chairman, has received voluntary assurances from both Republicans and Democrats outside the committee ranks that they would support her against the stringent measures proposed by some of the drys, the most militant of which has been Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), of Texas.

Smith Bill Rigidly Dry.

Representative Howard W. Smith, (Democrat), Virginia, however has introduced the most stringent bill proposed for the District. His measure would forbid the sale of liquor by the drink, even in private clubs. He said yesterday he will appear at the joint committee hearings to urge approval of his bill.

The American and District Pharmaceutical Associations will be represented by witnesses whose appearance was arranged by Eugene C. Brokmeyer, their attorney. Other who have signified their desire to be heard include the Women's Organization for District of Columbia Liquor Control, of which Mrs. William Beverley Mason is chairman. Miss Elizabeth C. Harris, vice chairman, will speak for that organization.

The association will advocate a six-point plan which provides for a liquor board of three, one a woman, to have broad powers of regulation to meet changing conditions; low taxes, separate licenses for on and off premise consumption, separate licenses for beer and wine, and liquor, and power vested in the control board to revoke licenses.

All Groups Notified.

Marion De Vries will represent the Wine Producers Association; A. J. Driscoll, the Midcity Citizens Association; Edwin S. Hege, the Chevy Chase Citizens Association, and others will represent the University Club, the Hotel and Restaurant Keepers Alliance and the Federation of Civic Associations.

Notice of the hearings has been sent by the committees to all organizations represented at the hearings last April on the District beer measure. These include the Antisaloon League.

The hearings are expected to be completed tomorrow morning.

Frank Lord, Daughter Win Bridge Tourney

Frank B. Lord and his daughter, Ruth, were the winners of the first January bridge tournament of the National Press Club. They had a top of 51½ out of a possiblee 84 points. Second place was won by Mrs. John D. Mothershed and Mrs. Dixie Wright, with a total of 50½ points.

The next play will be January 15 and all subsequent contests will be on alternate Mondays. Following the January 15 tournament, midseason trophies of sterling silver will be awarded the two highest pairs of the winter play.

"Horse Hotel" Is City's Pride

Philadelphia (U.P.).—The pride of the Department of Public Works is its "horse hotel" where 116 city-owned and carefully selected horses are quartered.

"We have seven stable men on duty constantly and we strive to keep our reputation of having the finest and cleanest city-owned stable in the country," Supt. S. Armour McClay said.

"We have our own blacksmith's shop located on the premises and also our own harness shop, where a harnessmaker is kept busy repairing and renewing the harnesses. Our wagons are kept in an open-air inclosure back of the stable. They are washed regularly each week and painted three times a year. Each night they are covered with tarpaulin.

"We pride ourselves on the way our horses are kept. They are groomed twice a day and the drivers are under orders to take especial care of the animals.

"We also pride ourselves that we have upset the popular theory of rats being found wherever there is a stable. Our floors are concrete and the entire stable is swept out every day. In the summer it is flushed out with a fire hose each morning. In the winter we do that three times a week. No rat could burrow under here or make a nest with that situation."

Pupils of Petworth School Build a Train And Like It Even Better Than Airplanes

Mothers, Too, Will Receive Rides if They Agree on Destination.

I'm strong and fast,
I'm fine and new;
Good-by, slow pokes,
Choo, choo, choo, choo!

First grade pupils at the Petworth School were singing this verse yesterday afternoon as they rode in a train of their own manufacture, inspired by a recent visit to Union Station. The situation may sound like play to boys and girls who have advanced further than the first grade, but it's work, and mighty instructive work, to these youngsters.

The children are making a study of transportation under the direction of Mrs. Helen Cole, their teacher. Last year they studied aviation, visited Hoover Airport and introduced planes of their own creation in the classroom.

"But we like trains best," Truman Ward, engineer on the Petworth Special, told the Post reporter, as he piloted his precious cargo into the night. At least, that's what he said he was doing, and it looked realistic.

Hello, There, Casey!

Behind him, LeRoy Whitman frantically shoveled coal. In the carriage, Doris Miner clutched a doll in one hand and clung to the window railing with the other. Her fellow passengers were Fay Dhein, Joan Yileck and Sidney Loub.

"Casey Jones was a good engineer, too," young Truman Ward shouted, as he neared a bend. "Hold on!" he warned his passengers. The young passengers responded by bursting into another verse of their new class song:

I'm strong, I'm strong,
I'm fast, I'm fast,
I'll reach that tall New York at last.

"It's not all play," Mrs. Cole explained as her pupils roared on their way. "Arithmetic, geography and history are all combined in this transportation course. These boys and girls are learning how to tell time through using time tables, and they are learning about money through the sale of the tickets."

Tickets and Everything.

The teacher pointed to a ticket office in one corner of the classroom, where two little boys were selling fares to Chicago to two little girls.

Mothers of the railroad students will be their guests at a party soon, Mrs. Cole announced. Tea will be served in the train and the mothers will be taken on a trip, providing they all agree on the same destination.

This activity at the Petworth has a parallel in first grades of other District schools. The Postoffice Department is being studied in some classes, and the grocery and department store business in others.

"But we like trains best," young Truman Ward reiterated.

Suit Says Park Bank Used 2 Notes Wrongly

Claiming the Park Savings Bank only had custody of two $500 notes which it placed with the RFC as part of the collateral behind a loan to the bank, Nannie Counselman, as executrix of the estate of Katherine M. Counselman, 3467 Fourteenth street northwest, yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to order their return to her.

In addition, damages of $1,000 were sought. The notes, it was claimed, had been purchased shortly before they were pledged. They were left with the bank for safe keeping, the suit alleged.

King Arranges Citizen Forum With Senators

Civic Groups Will Discuss Local Problems With District Committee.

Representatives of District business and civic organizations will be given the opportunity to present their views on the needs of the city at a meeting with the Senate District Committee, Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah), chairman, announced yesterday.

Date for the forum will be fixed soon, and from the roundtable discussion important legislation may develop. Senator King believes the meeting will be worth while because it will make committee members and the citizens acquainted with each other. He added:

"I feel sure members of the committee will be interested in hearing from the people of Washington their views on the problems and needs of the city. Such a meeting will give an opportunity for an informal and general discussion such as would not be practicable under the conditions governing any formal hearing to consider specific legislation."

The Commissioners, Federation of Citizens Associations, Chamber of Commerce, Board of Trade, Merchants and Manufacturers Association, women's organizations and others will be invited to send representatives, Senator King said.

Man Basking by Bonfire Injured by Cartridge

A cartridge tossed by an unidentified person into a bonfire on Benning road northeast near the District line early yesterday exploded, wounding John Jenkins, 45, of 1207 M street northwest, in his right leg.

Jenkins had been watching the fire with several men. He was taken to Casualty Hospital, where his injury was described as slight.

Tax Estimate Reveals District Drinkers Fond of Hard Liquor

Nearly Gallon Per Capita, Auditor Calculates for Spirits.

Washington is a hard-liquor-drinking city, if the fiscal estimates of District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan may be considered reflective of the tastes of National Capital residents.

Analyzing an earlier estimate of $785,000 return from liquor and wine taxes and license fees, Maj. Donovan yesterday revealed his prediction was based on the assumption that per capita consumption of hard spirits in 1935 will be eighty-three hundredths of a gallon.

Yet he estimated the per capita consumption of wines over 14 per cent alcoholic content would be but fourteen-hundredths of a gallon and of light wines but twenty-five hundredths of a gallon.

The 50-cent tax on liquor is expected to produce $210,000, and a similar tax on wine over 14 per cent an additional $35,000. Light wines, with a 20-cent tax, are expected to add $25,000.

A tax of $1.10 a gallon on alcohol will produce practically no revenue, according to the auditor, and the District bill provides for no tax on beer.

License fees, it is estimated, will produce $515,000 or almost twice as much as the taxes, which total $270,000.

Cost of administring the District act is placed at $82,000 by the auditor. This includes salaries of $8,000 each for three members of the control board, $10,200 total for three assistant corporation counsel, 10 inspectors and investigators at $2,000 each, and several stenographers and clerks. Office expenses are set at $10,560.

Auditor Donovan emphasized his income estimate was conservative and that a revenue of $900,000 may well be obtained.

1934 Officers Installed By Cosmopolitan Club

The Cosmopolitan Club yesterday installed Col. William H. McCarty as its new president at its meeting in the Carlton Hotel. Robert W. McChesney, retiring president, was installing officer.

Others inducted into office were Lester B. Powell, vice president; Henry S. Owens, treasurer, and Michael D. Schaefer, secretary.

The retiring president and Thomas J. Groome, retiring treasurer, were presented with gifts by James E. Colliflower on behalf of the club.

Utility Board Will Survey Transit Line

Company Also to Make Study of Lines in Seeking Changes.

Revision of Schedules in Down Town Areas Contemplated.

The Capital Transit Co. has completed an organization to make a thorough survey of track routes, and the task will be undertaken at once, John H. Hanna, president, stated yesterday.

Simultaneously, Riley E. Elgen, acting chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, announced the commission had decided to conduct a survey with its own force rather than through an outside agency.

Fred A. Sager, chief engineer of the commission, who had considerable experience in street railway studies and planning before coming to Washington, will be in charge of the commission's survey, Elgen said.

Surveys to Take 4 Months.

The railway's study will be under the direction of William Bennett, assistant to the president, and entirely by Capital Transit Co. engineers.

An associate consulting engineer may be employed by the commission to assist Sager and his staff, Elgen said.

Both surveys will take three or four months, it is estimated, and the railway plans to make its organization more or less permanent so as to continue improvements in the system, Hanna said.

After data is collected the commission will hold a public hearing to give street car patrons an opportunity to protest proposals they may dislike.

One of the first problems to be considered is rerouting on Constitution avenue between Sixth street and Missouri avenue because of plans to widen the avenue in the immediate future.

Line Changes Sought.

Rerouting of north and south tracks in the downtown area offers one of the major tasks. Railway experts believe that there is no need for tracks on Seventh, Ninth, Eleventh and Fourteenth streets, and the criss-crossing in the vicinity of Florida avenue should be eliminated.

One suggestion which will be considered is the continuation of cars running on Seventh street to Georgia avenue, instead of west on Florida avenue, thereby eliminating the need for the Ninth street line, which runs into Georgia avenue.

Another proposal which will be considered will be the extension of the Wisconsin avenue line over M street into the heart of the city. The cars now stop at Wisconsin and M in Georgetown.

Elgen also revealed yesterday that he has asked the Capital Transit Co. to make a study of the schedule of the Wesley Heights bus line to improve service to Wisconsin avenue and Messenden street.

Yeggs Loot Drug Store Vault of Cash and Dope

Loot included $210 in cash, $10 in stamps, heroin and morphine tablets valued at $150, perfumes valued at $10, and a quantity of whisky.

Duke Is Forced To Defend Self In Disbarment

3-Judge Court Overrules Motion to Dismiss Attorney's Case.

The three justices sitting in the disbarment trial of Attorney Jesse C. Duke yesterday declined to dismiss the case at the conclusion of the prosecution testimony, offered under auspices of the grievance committee of the Bar Association.

Mr. Duke and his associates made lengthy arguments on their motion for dismissal. The justices, Chief Justice A. A. Wheat, and Justices Daniel W. O'Donoghue and Jennings Bailey, overruled the motion and Duke then began presentation of his defense.

Fifty-four witnesses have been summoned by the attorney, who is charged with making false accusations against Justice F. D. Letts and United States Attorney Leo A. Rover. The accusations consisted of charging that a "false, inaccurate, incomplete, deleted and diluted" bill of exceptions had been sent up to the Court of Appeals.

John M. Hoffman, jr., an attorney, and Adolph Moder, one of the defendants in a criminal trial which led to the drafting of the charges, were placed on the stand. Moder testified as to the receipt of a letter advising him to discharge Duke and retain another lawyer to prosecute his appeal.

Moder is to resume direct examination today. Indications are the trial will last two weeks more.

$35,000 Suit Is Filed For Hurts in Store

Damages of $35,000 were sought in District Supreme Court yesterday by George Summers and his wife, Ida, of 3500 Sixteenth street northwest, because of alleged injuries suffered by Mrs. Summers in a fall in a store at 3500 Eighteenth street northwest.

Mrs. Summers charged that she fell over an obstruction and broke her arm. Her suit asked $25,000 and her husband's $10,000. The fall occurred last August.

Painless Trap Prize Offered Fur Hunters

Albany, N. Y. (U.P.).—The American Humane Association has announced a cash prize contest for the construction of painless traps for use in the fur and pelt industry.

The purpose of the contest is to encourage inventors and trappers to produce traps which will take the cruelty out of trapping. As a by-product has come the knowledge that the pelts themselves are in better condition when the animals have been taken humanely. Prizes of from $150 to $40 will be awarded.

Youthful Girl Evangelist Believes Repeal Wise

"The drunkards are going to drink anyway, and the good people of the country will let liquor alone, so the Government might as well have the revenue as the bootleggers and racketeers," she believes.

First Lady on Tour Of Schools Tuesday

Mrs. Roosevelt Accepts Bid of Mrs. H. G. Doyle.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will visit several District schools next Tuesday at the invitation of Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, vice president of the Board of Education.

Mrs. Roosevelt will be accompanied by Mrs. Doyle. At Alice Deal Junior High School, students will give the First Lady a demonstration of student citizens and Government activities. Two of the centers where lunches are being served to needy children then will be visited.

The inspection will be concluded at the Dennison Vocational School, where Mrs. Roosevelt will be served luncheon. Mrs. Doyle said she was prompted to invite Mrs. Roosevelt to visit schools because of the First Lady's deep interest in all educatoinal activities. This will be the first inspection of Washington schools made by Mrs. Roosevelt.

Loncoln, Neb. (U.P.).—A debate planned by the I. O. O. F. Lodge here last week was postponed when a member of the debate team lost his false teeth. When they are replaced, the event will be held, lodge members said.

Cherry Trees To Blossom With Holly

Dark Green Contrast Is Planned to Famous Pink Blooms Here.

PWA Allots $10,000 to Finish Tidal Basin Landscape Project.

Japan's pink cherry blossoms around the Tidal Basin will bloom this spring against the green background of American holly.

To improve one of Washington's most famous sights, the Public Works Administration yesterday allotted $10,000 for a plan drawn by landscape architects of the National Parks office.

Officials last night said holly will be planted in open spaces between the cherry trees. When originally planted, they pointed out, the cherry trees were quite small, and with growth their branches came so close together htat they shut off the petaled vistas across the Basin.

To correct this, trees were removed, reopening the view across the water.

The advantage of the plan, it was pointed out, lies in the contrast to be derived from the cherry blossoms against the dark green of the holly. Lack of foliage at blossom time for the cherry trees, they said, produces the famous sight of the trees with scarcely a green leaf showing.

Plans call for planting of the holly in groups of three or four trees around a center plant. As they will not grow to a great height, they will still allow the basin vista between the cherry trees, architects said, and in their own berry season will strike a cheery note in winter.

Dempsey to Promote Baer-Carnera Title Battle at Yankee Stadium

Boxing's Gift To Movies In Town

Contends His Brother Is Best Fighter and Singer of Baers.

Learned Only Little of Carnera at Hollywood; Likes the Screen.

By Bill McCormick.

MAX BAER, leading contender for the heavyweight championship, who arrived yesterday for a week's engagement at the Fox Theater, will fight Primo Carnera in June or July, it was said by Ancil Hoffman, Baer's manager. The bout will be held at the Yankee Stadium under the promotion of Jack Dempsey, who is expected in Washington Sunday to confer with his protege and Hoffman regarding the bout.

The great sued and pursued No. 1 heavyweight contender, dropped plop into a group of autograph seekers, militantly adulatory females, pugs, managers and unadulterated hero-worshipers through which he finally broad-shouldered his way to a waiting automobile, which whisked him to the seclusion of a hotel suite far from the maddening throng.

Before the 220-pound blend of dimples, personality and right hand knockouts got his guard up to face his public, a horde of newspaper men sneaked up on his by boarding in Baltimore, the train bearing him from New York. Guided by the sound of sonorous snoring, the newshounds located Mrs. Baer's little boy, Maximillian Adelbert, sleeping as peacefully as Santa Clause on December 26—his frame overflowing the sides of the parlor car seat like a two-bit order of beer in a half-pint growler.

Every Man For Himself.

From then on it was every man for himself, with Maximillian Adelbert in the middle. One after another questions were fired at him—and one after another he fired back with frank answers intersposed with spicy bits of Hollywood studio gossip.

"Max, what about all these suits?"

"It looks like an open season on me. So help me, it's getting terrible. I never even saw this woman who's sueing me now. That's how it is."

"How's all this affecting the bank roll, Max," was next popped at him.

"Its not doing it any good," answered the woman's home companion of the movies, wasting a million-heart-throb smile on an agog protographer, "But I'm getting by—and putting a little away. There's a lot of talk about my blowing money, but I'll have some when I'm all through. I spend, but I save too—in trust funds and annuities."

In rapid succession he answered questions concerning everything anyone could think of. No, he had never been groggy in the ring—never even been hurt, as a matter of fact. He loves to fight, and loves to make movies. Doesn't care particularly which he does, but wants to stay where he can make the most money. About Carnera?

Learned Only a Little.

"I think we'll fight next summer, but you'll have to ask my manager. I dunno whether I can beat him or not, but it'll be a great battle. No, I didn't learn much about Carnera's fighting in those movie sequences, but I learned a little.

"I was afraid he'd try to cross me up and flatten me before all those extras, and I guess he was afraid of the same thing. We only got serious once, and then I started throwing 'em hard in the tummy. Jack Dempsey almost died, waving me down and reminding me that I might ruin a great gate next summer."

After the fight sequences were shot, Carnera confessed a great liking for Baer, a liking so great that he doesn't want to fight him. One of Baer's greatest problems since then has been in trying to convince the Stupendous Stooge that they can fight and still be friends—afterward.

Baer thinks his young brother, Buddy, just 18 years old, as a great prospect. "Six feet 2½ inches, 250 pounds solid," the great heart-throb specialist explains with filial affection. "Naturally just about as anyone in the ring—and he punches with either hand. He has a great voice, too. I guess whether he goes into the ring or not depends on whether I take Carnera. If I do, I guess Buddy'll have to sing for a living—we couldn't fight each other for the title."

Practical Jokes Recalled.

From Odenton to Benning, he regaled the scribes with tales of Jack Dempsey and the practical jokes they played on each other. Most of them have been told before and some are too Rabelaisian for public consumption.

The California cut-up explained all about that laughing-when-hit business, one of his most colorful ring tricks. It all started in his first fight which, strange as it seems, he had at the age of 20, with an itinerant painter of church steeples.

Some of the younger element had stolen a jug of wine belonging to the slinger of paint and as the biggest, Baer was chosen to break the sad news. The brush wielder came sailing in with both fists flying, smacking the present heavyweight contender. Baer laughed and clanched a wild right-hand that took all the fight out of the opposition. He has been luaghing when hit ever since.

"Most of the things I did against Schmeling I did on the spur of the moment; they weren't planned," he explains. "I didn't even think I could hit him when I went in to fight, but I found out in the first round when I sneaked in a left hook. I came back in my corner and told Ancil Hoffman that I was going to knock him out."

"Come up and see me at the theater this week," he yodeled, just before stepping into the welcoming committee.

Billy Howell Will Expand Tourney Activities in 1934

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 4 (AP).—Billy Howell, slender Virginian, who two seasons ago stroked his way to the semifinals of the National Amateur golf tournament, will range a comeback trail this year, extending from Boston to New Orleans.

Encouraged by his employers—the former Washington and Lee ace is now working in a clothing store—to continue participation in his favorite sport, Billy plans to start strict training the first of next month.

Although he has been able to play only once or twice a month recently, the blond youngster has been getting around in the low 70's.

To Expand Activities.

The 1932 Walker Cup player plans to compete in practically all the events he previously entered, and in addition will expand his activities to include the National Open which is scheduled this year for the Merion Links, where Bobby Jones won his first and last amateur championships.

Billy plans to start his campaign in the North and South Amateur at Pinehurst in March, where he possibly will meet George Dunlap, National amateur champion, who has long been a winter resident at Pinehurst.

After Pinehurst Billy will compete in the Cavalier Open at Virginia Beach and in the Old Dominion event at Hot Springs. He is undecided whether to enter the North and South Open Tournament at Pinehurst.

Amateur and Open.

The other definite dates on Billy's 1934 calendar are the National Amateur and Open, provided he qualifies in the sectional trials; the Southern Amateur at New Orleans, which he will attend as the most youthful director of the Southern Golf Association; the invitation tournament at Nashville, Tenn., and the State and city amateur competitions.

If there are no conflicts in dates, Billy also may enter the Middle Atlantic tournament, the State Open and the Biltmore-Forest invitation. His appearance in the Western Amateur is less likely.

Tilden, Vines to Play Here on January 13

Surrounded by a galaxy of net stars, and himself still glittering brightly in the national tennis firmament, Big Bill Tilden will bring his troupe of netmen to Washington for an exhibtion Saturday, January, 13. Permission to use the Tech High School gynasium, the only obstacle hindering arrangements, was granted yesterday.

With the group will be Ellsworth Vines, former U. S. National champion who still ranks as one of the most potent racquet wielders in the game.

Nine Grid Games Listed By Western Maryland

The schedule:

November 3, Catholic University, away; 10, West Chester, away; 17, Bucknell, away; 24, Georgetown, at Baltimore; 29, Mount St. Mary's, here.

Giants Deny Lively Ball Opposition

World Champs Have All to Gain, Nothing to Lose, They Say.

Predict Added Punch, and No Loss of Box Power on Defense.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4 (AP).—The impression seems to have gotten about that Bill Terry and his world champion New York Giants are a bit glum about the faster, standard ball that will be unveiled by the American and National League presidents in Philadelphia tomorrow.

So Charles A. Stoneham, president of the club, and Jim Tierney, secretary, want it understood right now that nothing could be farther from the truth; that the Giants, in fact, from Stoneham all the way down through Terry and the rank and file, believe they have everything to gain and nothing to lose by the change.

Giants Voted for Change.

"As a matter of fact, we voted for the change in Chicago when the decision to adopt a uniform ball close to American League standards was made at the league meetings," Tierney insisted. "We weren't opposed to it, as stories from there indicated. And here's why:

"We talked it all over—Terry, Mr. Stoneham and I—and Terry told us he was certain he'd hit a faster ball at least 20 points better than the .332 average he had last season.

"He said there isn't a batter on our club who doesn't figure to improve his average a great deal with the new ball. Frank O'Doul, a smart, line-drive hitter, should climb right back to the top again. Mel Ott, a natural slugger, will be clouting into the stands. George Davis, Joe Moore, Johnny Vergez, all line hitters, will drive more balls through the infield."

The hitting part is genuinely accepted, but what about the effect of a faster ball on the superlative pitching that carried the Giants to the National League title when the hitters failed last season? Stoneham answered that as Al Smith would.

Points to Washington Games.

"Look at the record," he said. "You saw Carl Hubbell, Hal Schumacher, Dolfo Luque and Freddy Fitzsimmons pitch that American League ball to the Senators in the world series games in Washington. What happened?

"Schumacher, until he suddenly blew up, was better than he had been in the first game in New York pitching the National League ball. Hubbell, tired and under a tremendous strain, pitched greater ball in Washington than he did here. Luque was superb in his one relief appearance. Only Fitzsimmons failed to win and he had but one chance.

"Yes indeed, there were a couple of times there when we were very grateful for the faster American League ball. That double play Blondy Ryan started to wind up the fourth game, for instance. If Bolton had hit a National League ball down to shortstop it might not have traveled fast enough to make that double play possible.

"Little Hughie Critz can give you an idea of what the players think about it. He wrote me before the major league meetings.

"'When are we going to get the lively ball back?' he asked. 'I want to stay around this club a while longer.'"

School Nines Open Series April 17

Eastern Stadium Is Again Seene; Football Dates Also Announced.

THE crack of the interhigh baseball series bats will resound over the District April 17, with Eastern and Western clashing at Eastern High School Stadium, the scene of the round robin horsehide series, according to the schedule announcement by John Paul Collins, president and treasurer of the Interhigh-Athletic Association.

As usual, the five high schools will be represented in the play, Eastern, Western, Central, Tech and Roosevelt, unlike the situation last year in which Roosevelt High was on the borderline of throwing up the sponge.

May 1, Roosevelt vs. Tech; 4, Central vs. Western; 8, Eastern vs. Tech; 11, Central vs. Roosevelt; 15, Tech vs. Western; 18, Eastern vs. Roosevelt.

In releasing the baseball slate, Collins also made known the 1934 football schedule. The games will be played in Central Stadium, as has been done in the past.

The schedule in full:

October 16, Eastern vs. Tech; 19, Roosevelt vs. Western; 23, Central vs. Tech; 26, Eastern vs. Western; 30, Central vs. Roosevelt.

November 2, Tech vs. Western; 6, Eastern vs. Roosevelt; 9, Central vs. Western; 13, Roosevelt vs. Tech; 16, Central vs. Eastern.

$300,000 Racing Plant Planned in California

San Francisco, Jan. 4 (AP).—The State racing commission today granted a permit to the California Jockey Club to conduct racing in San Mateo County.

The new club, which will alternate meetings with Tanforan Track, will construct a plant on a 120-acre site 20 miles south of San Francisco. Peter B. Kyne, author, is president of the club. William P. Kyne, prominent Western turfman, will be general manager. The two Kynes are not related.

Construction will begin February 1. The new plane will be ready for operation next October 19. A 50-day fall meeting will be held. General Manager Kyne said about $300,000 would be spent on the layout.

Boys' Club Cage Loop Entries Close Monday

Entries for the Boys Club of Washington basket ball league in the 85-pound, 100-pound, 115-pound and 145-pound classes will close Monday, Charles Reynolds, athletic director of the Boys Club, announced yesterday.

Times and dates for weighing in are Tuesday, January 9, from 3:30 to 5 p. m., the 85 and 100 pound classes; Wednesday, January 10, from 7 to 9 p. m., the 115 and 130 pound classes, and Thursday, January 11, from 7 to 9 p. m., the 145-pound class.

Roosevelt Wins In 2d Extra Period

Downs Alexandria, 25-23; Smith's Mid-Floor Shot Is Margin.

REX SMITH'S mid-floor potshot near the close of the second extra three-minute period won Roosevelt its fifth straight basket ball game at the expense of Alexandria yesterday, 25 to 23.

At the end of the half, the Ruf Riders, who were playing on their home floor, were leading by a comfortable margin, 15 to 7. However, the Twins bottled up the Roosevelt offense and at the same time scored 16 points, while the District team accounted for 8. The game ended at the regulation period, 23 to 23.

Wild Extra Period.

There followed a wild extra period session in which the ball changed hands many times, but failed to puncture the hoop and the score remained deadlocked. The second extra session appeared to be a carbon copy of the first, until, with seconds to go, Smith former Central star, let go his game winning 2-point heave. Then the whistle blew.

Grand National Draws 10 U. S. Jumpers

Bostwick to Enter and Ride His Chenango in British Classic March 23.

LONDON, Jan. 4 (AP).—Seventy-three of the leading equine jumpers of two continents, including three former winners, today were named for the 1934 renewal of the Grand National, world's most famous steeplechase, to be run at Aintree, March 23.

The list of entries, six more than last year, includes 10 American-owner jumpers, headed by George H. (Pete) Bostwick's Chenango, and Mrs. C. S. Bird's Heartbreak Hill, which went to the post the favorite to win the 1933 running for the Boston sportswoman, only to fail to complete the 4½-mile journey. The only important absentee is Kellsboro Jack, which carried the silks of Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark, of New York, to victory in the event last year.

Bostwick on Chenango.

Chenango, bred in Europe but shipped to America to earn a reputation under the colors of Thomas Hitchcock, sr., will be ridden by young Bostwick, wealthy sportsman generally rated the outstanding amateur jockey of the world. Chenango, a gelded son of Hapsburg, recently won his first start in England with Bostwick in the saddle. Bostwick was up on John Hay Whitney's Dusty Foot last year on his first ride over the Grand National course, but was thrown at Becher's Brook.

Although Kellsboro Jack will not be present, the Clark silks will be carried by two newcomers, Sorley Boy and Jack O'Day. Kellsboro Jack is still racing but Mrs. Clark stuck by her decision, made after the 1933 victory, not to start her star in the race again.

Whitney, usually a large nominator, will have two representatives, Lone Eagle and Thomond II. Dusty Foot will campaign only in the United States. Of the pair, Thomond II has the better record and probably will figure highly in the prerace wagering.

Theras Won Yesterday.

The other American entries include Jesse Metcalf's Theras, which won his fourth straight race in accounting for the Worcester Steeplechase Handicap today, and a stablemate, Patron Saint, M. D. Blair's Prince Cherry, and J. B. Snow's Delaneige, a veteran of several Grand Nationals.

The former winners in the field are Gregalach, victor in 1929 and a starter in every race since his triumph; Grakle, the longshot winner of 1931, and Forbra, which led the field home in 1932. Dorothy Paget, a relative of the Whitneys, again will start Golden Miller, which ruled the favorite to win last year's race until supplanted by Heartbreak Hill on the eve of the classic, while Pelorus Jack, a contender until he fell at the last fence, is also listed among the nominees.

With a larger list of entries than last year, the starting field is expected to surpass the 1933 figure, when 34 faced the barrier and 16 finished back of Kellsboro Jack.

Great Field Entered.

The American representation, in addition to Chenango, Thomond II and Theras, includes Mrs. C. S. Bird's Heartbreak Hill, John Hay Whitney's Lone Eagle, J. B. Snow's Delaneige, F. Ambrose Clark's Sorley Boy and Jack O'Day, Jesse Metcalf's Patron Saint and M. D. Blair's Prince Cherry.

The remainder of the entries are Libourg, White Rambler, Lewes, Grakle, Society, Inverse, Apostasy, Kilbuck, Merriment IV, Glen Hazel, Richborough, Silver Grail, Shore-

Bailey Relates Own Version Of Crash

Says He Doesn't Remember About Play; Did Not See Shore.

BOSTON, Jan. 4 (AP).—Irvin "Ace" Bailey, injured Toronto hockey player, whose escape from death probably will go down in medical annals, today was permitted to make a fleeting contact with the world outside his sickroom.

The world, or rather its representative, a newspaperman, was admitted to his bedside to hear his own story of the most serious accident that has befallen the game of hockey in more than 30 years.

Before he had passed into a coma in a Boston garden dressing room on the night of December 12, he had absolved Eddie Shore, the Boston player who collided with him and felled him to the ice with such force that his skull was fractured.

Didn't See Shore.

"It's all in the game, Eddie," Bailey answered when the remorseful Shore expressed his sorrow over the accident. Today the same charitable spirit dictated his version of the happening.

"I didn't see Eddie and he didn't see me, and we crashed," Bailey explained in a weak but clear voice.

"I don't remember anything leading up to the play or anything about the game except what I have been told. Art Ross, the Bruins manager, has described the events leading up to the accident. He said Horner and Clancy were out on a rush and that Marty Barry, of the Bruins, had the puck. Shore was offside in our defensive zone and was skating back to avoid a penalty, Ross told me that I was skating back to cover Horner's and Clancy's territory, and we crashed. That's all. This is the first bad accident I have ever had in hockey, and I can't remember exactly what happened."

Feeling Much Better.

In his answer to a question about his condition, Bailey replied: "I am feeling better today than I have any day since I have been here."

He was asked how long he thought it would be before he could play again.

"Ross told me," he said, "that I should forget hockey and rest for a couple of weeks and then I'd probably be fit to play. I reminded him that the season would soon be over, but he said not for a couple of months and that by that time we would be playing the Stanley Cup series and that I would be able to play in it."

Follows Teammates.

Bailey said for the past week or so he has felt strong enough to read the sports pages, in which he has closely followed the progress of his Toronto teammates.

"They've lost only 3 out of 20 games," he said proudly.

Seated beside Bailey during the interview were his wife, who prompted him once or twice, and his nurse. It was arranged by Dr. Donald Munro, the specialist, who twice operated on his brain. That specialist said today that "as soon as Bailey's period of convalescence is over, he will have made a complete recovery."

Dr. Munro, however, has refused to venture any predictions about hs patient's hockey future.

Shore Reinstated.

Montreal, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Eddie Shore, Boston National Hockey League player under suspension since the injury of Irvin "Ace" Bailey, Toronto Maple Leafs, in Boston December 12, will be permitted to return to the game on January 28. Announcement made here this morning by Frank Patrick managing director of the National Hockey League, disclosed Shore's status.

Definite reports from Boston physicians that Bailey was now well on the road to complete recovery brought about official action at National Hockey League headquarters.

Sarazen Is Favorite to Win; Entry List Is Past 150 Mark.

MacFarlane, Burke and Farrell Are Among Experts Entered.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 4 (AP).—One of the greatest fields in ten years of competition was entered tonight in the $2,000, 72-hole Miami Open golf tournament, starting tomorrow.

Registration lists, which include names of many of the crack shotmakers of the country, as well as a sprinkling of amateurs, have passed the 150 mark.

Practice rounds were completed today over the 6,130-yard, par-70 course, with indications that local entries may give the veterans a run for the money during the tournament, which opens with an 18-hole round tomorrow, followed by another Saturday and the final 36-hole grind Sunday.

Dow Shoots a 67.

Willie Dow, of Miami, led the field in the last practice rounds, carding a 67, three under par. Tommy Armour, the Black Scot from Chicago, came in with a 68, a stroke better than Gene Sarazen, P. G. A. champion, and Eddie Hassmann, of Miami.

Many of the other entries ran into difficulties and bowed to par.

Although California tournaments have attracted some of the colorful players from golf's green pastures in Florida in the past few weeks, there were plenty of veteran campaigners entered to make it one of the best in its ten-year history.

Principal among those missing is Johnny Revolta, the present title-holder, from Menominee, Mich., who now is competing in Pacific Coast tournaments. Another is Denny Shute, the British Open champion.

Sarazen, who won the Miami Open for four consecutive years from 1927 to 1930, has been looked upon to win again this year, but the hurdles will be none too easy.

MacFarlane Entered.

Standing in his path to the $500 top prize will be such contenders as Willie MacFarlane, the Scot from Tuckahoe, N. Y., who recently won the $10,000 Miami Biltmore tournament with first money of $2,500 and who has laid plans for a clean sweep through Florida meets this winter.

Among other leading players who have entered are Cyril Walker, Billy Burke, Johnny Farrell, Phil Perkins, Mike Brady, Willie Klein and Joe Turnesa.

Amateurs entered include Tommy Goodwin, Monroe, N. Y., holder of the South Florida and Dixie amateur championships; Curtis Bryan, winner of the last Florida year-round clubs tournament and Celest Durand, Garden City, N. Y., who has been campaigning in Florida for the last few years.

Vines Sees Chance To Defeat Tilden

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—Ellsworth Vines, jr., former Wimbledon and United States tennis champion, who recently joined the ranks of the professionals, arrived in New York today for his match next week with Bill Tilden, with the statement he felt more fit for play than he had since he beat Henri Cochet at Forest Hills a year and a half ago.

"I've gained 13 pounds in two months," Vines said as he went through a brisk practice session with Bruce Barnes at the seventy-fourth regiment courts, "and I've regained by keenness for the game that I lost during last summer's hard campaign.

Vines was hesitant to appraise his chances against Tilden, but finally said he believed he had a chance to win if he could keep Big Bill on the go and carry the match to five sets.

Frisco Bound

Gallico Taking Trip by Airplane to Do a Little Snooping.

By Paul Gallico.

EN ROUTE BY AIR, LOS ANGELES TO SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 4.—We are flying over what, if all the world were a golf course and all of us were merely trying to swindle our way around somewhere close to par, look like some very nasty bunkers. I think I would use a spoon off the tee, no, I think I would use a niblick. I think I would lay the blade wide open and give it all I had. These bunkers are called the Tecachapi Mountains. They lie just north of the Sierra Madre Range. Our ship is high, flying up the Tejon Pass, but my dear sainted aunt, these bunkers are even higher. Their summits seem to be dusted with that white stuff they use in Hollywood to make snow pictures.

I suppose some company has been up there on location and left its props. On second thought, it would take one hell of a niblick shot. I do not think much of the way this course is laid out, all traps and bunkers, and no fairways. I do like to see fairways below when I am flying. Still I do not know why I am making such a fuss over these hills. My trip map tells me they are only 8,000 feet high.

Now here is a curious and diverting phenomenon. We are flying over a white sea of clouds that stretches off endlessly to the Northwest. Directly in front of, and below the port engine nacelle there moves along the cloud surface a bright, round spot, sort of like a doughnut, but the doughnut part is a rainbow in lovely pastel colors. The hole of this ethereal doughnut is bright and in the exact center of it flies the miniature shadow of our ship like a faithful little pilotbird leading us on. To the East the white topped crags of the Sierras rise so high above this ceiling of clouds that they look like the mountains of the moon as cold, as high, as white, as distant.

Easterners who fly the Alleghenies en route to Chicago or Pittsburg clutch their bosoms as they pass over those ridiculous mole furrows we have the crust to call mountains. A few mild ridges that look as though they had been turned up by some burrowing animal, or a gigantic ploughshare. But mountains? Pulleeeese, Mrs. Plotnik. You are talking to a man who is looking at mountains. You fly through them or around them, but not over them.

This little jaunt to San Francisco is in quest of a sport story on the basis of a hunch. If I get it, you'll hear about it. If I don't—well, then there's no harm done and I will have seen the second most romantic city in these United States, there being three where that lovely treasure, romance, may be found—my own home, New York, San Francisco and New Orleans. (Oh, mios amigos! Have just peered down through a little well in the floor of clouds and we are so high up that if we fell it would take us until tomorrow to hit bottom).

Incidentally, they tell me this Frisco is a red hot fight town. I might snoop a little and see what is doing.

Things I want to do out here before I pack up and come home—go out to Jim Jeffries' barn in Burbank, where he runs amateur fights, and do a piece on it—if he is running any the next three or four days; go out to the Riviera Country Club on Sunday and watch the movie stars play polo and prepare an opus on that spectacle, and hang around the Los Angeles Country Club Saturday and Monday and see some of the playing of the Los Angeles open championship, probably the most important of the winter championships. Most of the big-shot golf stars are out here for that before they head for Florida swag hunts.

What's doing back home? I hear the wrassling trusts are going to blow the whistle on one another before the State Athletic Commission in New York. That will be fun. Rudy Miller, Jake (Hassen) Pfeffer

Jockey Porter Scores Second Triple in Row and Third of Tropical Park Meet

Feudal Lord Is Victor in Feature

Porter Rides Frederick to Place Over Tiring De Valera.

Wins on Dornoch, Forty Days and Escadron; Oriley Wins Again.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., Jan. 4 (AP).—Jockey Earl Porter, leading rider at the current meeting here, this afternoon scored his second triple in a row and his third of the session when he piloted home Dornoch in the third race, Forty Days in the fourth and Escadron in the sixth.

Porter sought his third victory of the day in the featured Ponce De Leon Purse but had to be satisfied with second. He rode the B. B. Stable's Frederick which trailed J. E. Small's Feudal Lord but brought his mount home ahead of H. C. Phipps' De Valera, an Easterner making his Tropical Park debut.

Feudal Lord, a 4-year-old gelding which might have won the Inaugural Handicap but for being blocked by his stablemate, proved today that he is one of the best sprinters of the local claiming brigade when he simply galloped to an impressive five-length victory. He ran the 5½ furlongs in 1:04 1-5, a fifth of a second slower than the track record. He paid $9.40.

Feudal Lord Is Best.

Apprentice E. Litzenberger, a boy who gained recognition on the Canadian ovals, was up on the winner. His mount interfered with Hastipast turning out of the backstretch, which in turn impeded Frederick, but Feudal Lord nevertheless was best. He came over from the outside and once in front, opened up a commanding lead, winning under plenty of wraps. Frederick, extricating himself from trouble at the far turn, responded gamely under Porter's urging in the stretch and caught the heavily-weighted De Valera in the last nod.

Peace Junior sprang a mild surprise when he registered an easy 3-length victory in the opener, returning $13.60. Polisher was up to beat Poles Apart by a half length for the place. Sunny Tom, the choice, broke slowly and was poorly ridden, finishing far back. Peace Junior reached contention early and ran over the leaders when Robertson called on the veteran sprinter.

Third in Row for Oriley.

Oriley kept his local record clean in the second race, the consistent son of Sting speeding to his third straight score in easy fashion. Blackmock was beaten a length while saving the place by a slightly wider margin from Premeditate. Blackmock ran Premeditate into defeat but could not withstand the winner's closing bid. Oriley returned $9.40. Zorano was favorite but was outrun and tired out of the money.

Porter scored his first victory in the third race. The Geneva, Ills., flash guided Dornoch, $3.60 favorite, first home by a neck in a rousing drive with Pat C. Mareve was a poor third. Pat C and Dornoch ran head and head all the way, Porter's strong riding and his mount's tenacity earning the purse.

Porter Completes Triple.

A few days ago Allen Tipton rode Forty Days and the colt never could threaten. Today Tipton had the leg up on Solid American and his mount was soundly beaten by the same Forty Days. Porter had the mount on the winner on this occasion and his masterful exhibition earned him a double. Solid American forced the winner's pace throughout, but Forty Days easily drew away in the last furlong. Playful Martha was in trouble at the first turn and finished a distance third. The winner returned $6.50.

Porter completed a triple for the second day in a row and for the third time at the meeting when he rode Escadron to an easy triumph in the sixth event. The B. B. Stable 3-year-old outfooted his field the entire mile distance and had four lengths of daylight over Eurydice passing the pay-off pagoda. Lauretta Nash closed well, but lost the place by a length. Escadron paid $5.50.

Bethesda Rally Beats Sherwood Five, 27-20

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High, starting the defense of its county title, was given a scare yesterday before it defeated Sherwood, 27-20, at Leland.

The eventual victors trailed, 16-12, at the half. The up-county boys were in the thick of the battle throughout the game, but weakened in the crucial moments to allow Ledge and Royer to sink four baskets in rapid succession and seal up the game. Beall and Bonifant were mainly responsible for the visitors' showing.

Strange as It Seems

The pyramid prison illustrated above was built by an eccentric Englishman, "Mad Jack" Fuller, who proposed to lock a man up in it for seven years so that he might study the effect of prolonged solitary confinement upon the human mind and body. It was his idea to keep the person there in the dark and quiet, talking to no one, seeing no one, doing nothing but eat, drink and sleep. Fuller wanted to see what would happen to a person so confined.

He advertised in English newspapers for a prospective prisoner who was willing to take the chance on insanity, or death, in exchange for support for his family, and a retirement fund for himself—if he survived. The publicity given the scheme soon made it known to authorities who, ruling the proposed experiment cruel and inhuman, ordered Fuller to lock no one up in his private jail.

Alex. High Nine May Not Be Organized

Early Ending of School May Mean Abandonment of Game.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Jan. 4 (Spl.).—If plans submitted to the city council and the school board for Alexandria High are favorably passed upon, there will be no baseball at the local institution. Nothing definite has been settled to date. The plans call for the closing of school at the end of April. Should this go into effect it will be useless for the Twins to attempt to have a team, as weather conditions here are not settled before early May.

Baseball always has been a popular sport in this city and some of the best players in this section are graduates of Alexandria. Last season the locals were champions of the Third District. They have always had a good baseball team here and the players and fans alike will miss the participation and also the pleasure of the Nation's most popular game.

Twins vs. Lee-Jackson.

Friday night, at Lee-Jackson gymnasium, at 8:30 o'clock, Alexandria High will be the guests of the Little Generals. A snappy preliminary game has been arranged between the Alexandria High lasses and the Lee-Jackson girls.

From past performances and the calibre of the players, the Alexandria boys should experience little or no difficulty in downing their less experienced foes. Lee-Jackson's line-up will be selected from Lewis, McGowan, Sublatt, Morris, Hawes, Rouse, Crandall and Rieley. This team will average close to six feet in height. Alexandria's squad is composed of the following: Godfrey, McManamin, Nugent, Chilcotte, Brewer, Apperson, Embrey and Penn.

Episcopal High School Dribblers showed real class in their workout here this afternoon. The team functioned perfectly in a scrimmage against Lee-Jackson. If today's play is a sample of what the Cherry and Black boys will do against competition in a regular game, Coach Fleming's worries will be few and far between. Episcopal opens with Landon School Wednesday at the Hilltop Gym.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Tropical Park Race Track, Jan. 4.

I will have to have a losing day before Clocker Mike shows up now. Mike was ejected from the Bennings' camp last night, you know, after I decided that one of us was a jinx. It seems my judgment was correct, for today the formidable Bennings chased four winners home. Oriley, Dornoch, Forty Days and Fort Dearborn all hot-footed to the wire. Something will have to be done about this Jockey Earl Porter. He rode three winners again today. And his wins are not "shoo-ins." In some instances, he gets the best of the mounts, but in most cases he has to battle every inch of the way. And he appears to like it. BILL.

First race—New Pin is a well-bred little filly which has caught the eye of the clockers. I'm told that she can run. Providing she overcomes an outside post position, I believe will get a winner here. Golden Dreams ran a fair race in her debut. May improve tomorrow. Red Sunset for the show.

Second race—Hawk Moth needs only to run back to that last effort to take care of this aggregation. Porter is likely to ride. Indian Salute surprised the other day and is dangerous. Broadsword, another recent winner, for the l

The Screen's Ten Best Money-Making Stars—Max Baer Arrives This Afternoon

Many Surprises in Voting; Baer Coming With Act; New Week's Bills.

A personal memorandum from Ernest A. Rovelstad, managing editor of Martin Quigley's Motion Picture Herald, foremost of the motion picture trade journals, brings word in anticipation of its regular publication under date of Saturday, January 6, that Marie Dressler was the "biggest money-making star of 1932-33," according to the results of a poll of 12,000 exhibitors, a survey made annually by the Herald.

The polling went beyond the mere determination of Miss Dressler's personal leadership at the box offices of the country. Through it, the exhibitors of the Nation spoke their final word on the identities of the "ten biggest money-making stars of 1932-33."

It is not the exhibitor's personal opinion that is expressed in this voting, but the actual box office statistics speaking through the exhibitors in terms of dollars and cents attracted to the ticket wickets. The questionnaire submitted to the motion picture retailers specified its requirements in these words:

"Please list the ten players whose pictures drew the greatest number of patrons to your theater from September 1, 1932, to September 1, 1933, without regard to age of picture, net profit, length of run, nature of competition or other conditions (weather, &c.) during exhibition."

Ten Box Office Best.

The "ten biggest money-making stars," in the order of their ranking by the theater owners' ballots, were as follows:

1. MARIE DRESSLER.
2. WILL ROGERS.
3. JANET GAYNOR.
4. EDDIE CANTOR.
5. WALLACE BEERY.
6. JEAN HARLOW.
7. CLARK GABLE.
8. MAE WEST.
9. NORMA SHEARER.
10. JOAN CRAWFORD.

Miss Dressler, it may be noted, repeated the victory she won in the 1931-32 survey. Will Rogers was ninth in that poll and Miss Gaynor second.

It is further worthy of note that feminine and masculine players evenly divide honors in the first eight rankings in the 1932-33 canvass.

Ranking was determined, according to Mr. Rovelstad, by the total number of citations received by each player.

In the cases of Miss Dressler and Will Rogers, winners of first and second places, respectively, it was found that the preponderance of votes cast specified the three first positions. There was no one close enough to such high ratings to challenge their supremacy.

Index of Public Taste.

The exhibitors' choice of the ten most heavily patronized stars also indicates to some extent the type of screen product preferred by the public. Five of the ten winning players appeared for the most part in comedy-drama, three in drama and two in comedy.

It will be interesting to bear in mind this purely cash-register determination of the most popular stars when announcement is made of the result of the voting among the motion picture critics of the Nation as to which were the "Ten Best Pictures" of approximately the period covered by the Motion Picture Herald's poll of the amount of black ink used up in the ledgers.

Partially recovered from the devastating effects of such a week of playing as no musicians have known since the passing of the marathon dance craze, the boys in the band and the standby entertainers at Pete Macias' Heigh-Ho Club have made a number of resolutions all having to do with the serious business of providing greater enjoyment for their patrons during the ensuing year. Federico and Francine, European dance team, being presented by Mine Host Macias as his premiere floor attraction for the first week of the new year, are appearing locally for the first time on any dance club floor in 1934. They began their career at the Moulin Rouge in Paris and, after having been featured in many of the capitals of Europe, only recently completed engagements at Essex House and Plaza in New York City. They also have played Radio-Keith-Orpheum and Loew vaudeville time.

Further Vote Revelations.

Reverting, we hope not too tediously, to the Motion Picture Herald's box-office vote, the players ranked, in the order named, in the second ten of best money makers are Joe E. Brown, Lionel Barrymore, Four Marx Brothers, as a team; Bing Crosby, Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, as a team; Edward G. Robinson, "Slim" Summerville, ZaSu Pitts, Maurice Chevalier and Fredric March.

It is a bit disconcerting, popular clamor and fan magazine blurbs being what they have been, to discover Helen Hayes rated No. 22, with only 15.2 per cent of the total vote to her credit; George Arliss, No. 24, with 13.7 per cent; Ann Harding, No. 29, with 8.9 per cent; Marlene Dietrich, No. 30, with 8.4 per cent, and the great Greta Garbo, No. 31, with 7.9 per cent.

No less surprising is the low position of John Barrymore at No. 33, with 7.6 per cent; Walter Huston, No. 47, with 4.7 per cent; Ruth Chatterton, No. 56, with 3.4 per cent; Leslie Howard, No. 68, with 1.9 per cent, and our own Kate Smith last in the ratings, No. 87, with an even 1 per cent.

Many Below 1 Per Cent.

If this be considered ignominious, then it should be known that there are an additional 87 players listed, among them some of the most prominent and apparently best-liked personalities of the current cinema, whose ratings were not computed in percentages because no one of them rated as much as 1 per cent of the total vote.

Picking around at random in this list are to be discovered such names as Ralph Bellamy, El Brendel, Stuart Erwin, Charles Laughton, May Robson, George Brent, Charlie Chaplin, Alice Brady, Carole Lombard and enough more to make up the 87.

In many instances the box-office evidence seems to bear no relationship whatever to the best acting that has been done during the interval between September 1, 1932, and September 1, 1933.

Perhaps a further excursion into this paradoxical aspect of the case will be undertaken at some later time—a contingency against which your most ardent hopes no doubt enthusiastically array themselves!

Another German language picture, "Ich Will Nicht Wissen Wer Du Bist," a light and lovely musical romance, directed by Geza von Bolvary, producer of "Zwei Herzen im Drei-Viertel Takt," and with music by Robert Stolz, who composed the melodies for that popular film, will be shown at Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets, tomorrow evening, January 5, at 8 o'clock. For those who do not understand the language, English titles have been superimposed.

Freaks Find Favor.

The first day's operation of the "Odditorium," from the Midway of the recent Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago, added up to seemingly conclusive final evidence that Roy Bard, ossified man, and Paul Desmuke, armless Texan, attracted more attention than any of the other human monstrosities and inanimate freaks of nature and man's inventiveness, displayed on the 16 stages and in the numberless glass cases of the exhibition.

Manager "Cash" Miller estimated that Wednesday's first-day attendance would exceed 5,000, which is quite a crowd, even in the Washington Auditorium.

There are no seats in the "Odditorium." Patrons make the round of the attractions afoot and seem to enjoy the novelty—evidently having attended sideshows before. The lecturers—ballyhoo boys to youse guys—imported from the Chicago Midway are said to be a show in themselves.

Performances will be continuous daily through January 9.

Just to whip up the old palpitation, following the let-down after the New Year's excitement, it is announced that Max Baer, the prize ring's gift to the cinema and the four-a-day, accompanied by his manager, Ancil Hoffman, and the four girls who participate in the act in which he will headline the vaudeville bill at Loew's Fox, beginning tomorrow, will arrive in Washington from New York this afternoon at 4:55 o'clock on The Representative, of Pennsylvania Railroad. Mr. Baer eventually is expected to throw a few of his better punches in the general direction of World's Champion Heavyweight Primo Carnera and mean them—as against the play-acting they did in "The Prizefighter and the Lady"—but at the moment he is doing a Georges Carpentier, who also went song-and-dance and got away with it. Anyhow, there he is at 4:55—take him or leave him.

Bravado!

And if there is anything you don't like in that last paragraph, Mr. Baer, remember we only weigh 108 and are only clowning, anyway! Just a lot of good, clean fun, eh, Mr. Baer? And we'll be seeing you, we're afraid!

Elmer Rice Hit A Second Week At the Rialto

Beginning today, John Barrymore, in "Counellor-at-Law," enters a second big week at the Rialto Theater, where Universal Pictures' screen production of the Elmer Rice play has been playing to crowded houses.

"Counsellor-at-Law" is the greatest play ever written by Elmer Rice, who was called upon by Universal Pictures to prepare the screen version.

The Rialto Theater completes its program for the second Barrymore week with shorter selected screen novelties, plus Graham McNamee as the Talking Reporter with the latest edition of the Universal News.

Karen Morley, Edmund Lowe in "Dinner At Eight"—Palace.

periences and encounters his fiancee, now a war nurse. She offers herself for atonement, and the fruition of their love amid the turmoil of war provides an unusually daring and dramatic situation.

Supporting roles in "Ace of Aces" are portrayed by Ralph Bellamy, Frank Conroy, Theodore Newton, Bill Cagney and others.

Added short reel attractions and the latest issue of the Paramount Sound News complete the program.

Fourteen-Star Film, Holdover At the Palace

"Dinner at Eight" will continue to cater to the Capital's appetite for rich screen fare for a second week at Loew's Palace.

One of the most notable casts in stage or screen history, this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer attraction is offered for the first time at popular prices.

Marie Dressler, John Barrymore, Wallace Beery, Jean Harlow, Lionel Barrymore, Lee Tracy, Edmund Lowe, Billie Burke, Karen Morely, Madge Evans, Jean Hersholt, Phillips Holmes, Louise Closser Hale and May Robson comprise the star-studded personnel.

Despite the abundance of stellar stars, each one is presented in an important role. "Dinner at Eight" is not only notable for this fact, but it unfolds a plot that has an unusual succession of dramatic episodes.

A Metro Willie Whopper cartoon, Hearst Metrotone News and an interesting sports reel are added features on the first of the gala January festival programs marking Loew's thirtieth anniversary celebration.

Miss Kenyon in Song Sketches Star at Earle

Doris Kenyon, star of stage, radio and motion pictures, comes to Warner Bros. Earle Theater, in person, the week beginning tomorrow, to headline the stage show. "Convention City," an uproariously funny comedy film, with a ten-star cast, headed by Joan Blondell, Adolphe Menjou, Dick Powell and Mary Astor, is the screen attraction.

"Convention City" presents an extraordinarily unique idea, dealing with riotous happenings during a salesmen's annual jamboree at Atlantic City. Friend wife is likely to sit up and take notice if her husband happens to be one of those who attend conventions without her.

The action is said to be fast and furious, beginning with the assembling of the salesmen and following them through a week of riotous escapades to a smashing climax in which a hotel, as well as reputations, is nearly wrecked.

Included in the support are Guy Kibbee, Frank McHugh, Patricia Ellis, Ruth Donnelly, Hugh Herbert, Hobart Cavanaugh, Grant Mitchell and Gordon Westcott.

The stage portion of the new program brings to Washington for the first time in a personal appearance Doris Kenyon, charming star of stage, screen and radio. Miss Kenyon's appearance is more than just a personal appearance. Her program consists of delicately etched characterizations in song.

Other acts are the Sizzlers, a quartette of boys who have introduced a new note in harmony singing to stage and radio; Nelson Clifford and Marie Marion in their comedy offering, "Dumber Than Ever," and "The Great Gretanos." A special attraction will be Mayri Chaney and Edward Fox, dance favorites.

The program will be completed by short reels, the Earle orchestral prelude and the new issue of the newsreel.

Marion Davies Returns for a Columbia Run

"Going Hollywood," the latest and easily one of the best of musical productions, with Marion Davies and Bing Crosby in the featured roles, is to be revived at Loew's Columbia Theater, for the week beginning tomorrow.

Marion Davies is pictured as the lonely school teacher who falls in love with the voice of a radio crooner. She follows him to Hollywood and after a series of exciting and humorous escapades wins stardom in pictures as well as the heart of her crooner.

Fifi D'Orsay, Ned Sparks, Stuart Erwin, Patsy Kelly, and the Three Radio Rogues support Miss Davies and Bing Crosby.

News events, a comedy and short subjects augment the feature.

Novel Musical Being Held at Keith Theater

Featuring Dolores Del Rio, Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Gene Raymond and Raul Roulien, this musical with its melodies by Vincent Youmans has attracted much attention to Keith's during the past week.

Due to the interest in the picture, which, incidentally, is attracting a large number of "repeaters," Keith's is booking a new set of subsidiary subjects for the week commencing tomorrow.

Max Baer Star Of Stage Bill At Loew's Fox

Max Baer, the screen's new "It" man and leading contender for the world's heavyweight pugilistic crown, appears in person on the stage, and Robert Montgomery and Madge Evans divide honors in the dramatic picture "Fugitive Lovers," on the screen to provide the feature of the first of the gala thirtieth anniversary program which opens tomorrow at Loew's Fox Theater.

In addition to Baer, who created among fans of both sexes following his initial appearance before the camera in "Prize Fighter and the Lady," the stage program includes a farcical comedy skit by the Diamond Boys, Sid Page & Co., in songs, dances and humor, and the unusual casting stars.

Melodrama is rampant in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture "Fugitive Lovers," which provides a new theme for the talking pictures. Virtually all the action in this exciting picturization of the story written by Ferdinand Reyher and Frank Wead, takes place on a bus as it whips across the continent from New York City.

Robert Montgomery, in the role of Porter, is an escaped convict who leads a prison break just as the bus is passing the penetentiary. While the firing causes the driver to halt the bus Montgomery climbs aboard, manages to get into the luggage rack, helps himself to clothing and enters the bus as a passenger.

An overture by Phil Lampkin and the Fox Orchestra, news events, and short subjects are added.

Stock Prices Change Little On Budget Data

List Closes Two-Tenths Off as Sales Decline to 1,210,840 Shares.

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—Speculative markets today weathered whatever surprise they may have received from the enormous figures in the Federal budget, and closing prices found most commodities with net gains while stocks, on the whole, showed little change.

Wall street, bewildered at first by word that the Government planned to borrow six billions in new money and four billions for refunding during a six months' period, appeared to have reached the conclusion that the President, in his presentation of the recovery program costs, had put the situation's worst foot forward and that the cards were on the table, whether or not all of them would have to be played.

The budget statement, it was pointed out, was bold and bald, but it set a limit to expenditure and it provided for footing the bills through orthodox means.

Credit Expansion Seen.

That the prospective borrowing program foreshadows further credit expansion, which is regarded as a possible form of inflation, was accepted as inevitable, and no doubt the moderate advance in staple prices got its impetus from this view.

Stocks stood virtually motionless while traders tried to digest the budget figures; later, metal shares, inspired partly by fresh silver agitation in Congress, this time in the House, and partly by renewed rumors of an impending free gold market, rallied and irregular advances occurred elsewhere.

The average net change was a decline of two-tenths point. Volume was only 1,210,840 shares.

Views of Banks.

Bankers pointed out that the projected Government borrowing would lend velocity to bank deposits and credit, since the banks obviously would have to absorb the major portion of the new issue creating Federal deposits against which the Government would be constantly drawing.

That the Treasury would have little difficulty in selling the bonds was regarded as scarcely open to argument.

Other points stressed in various quarters included the Government's decision against asking for new taxes; the fillip which business should receive from the vast expenditures; and possible evolutions of monetary policy from now on. Some thought a steady dollar would be most useful to Washington and that the depreciation program might be allowed to drift a while. Rising money markets would be an unwelcome handicap.

Maintains Even Balance.

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—The New York Telephone Co maintained an almost even balance between installations and cancellations during December, losing only 16 stations after having lost 1,341 in November. This compares with net loss of 16,285 in December, 1932.

According to Official Estimate Government Is Now Faced With Necessity of Borrowing More Than $1,000,000,000 a Month.

By Ralph West Robey.

With an officially estimated deficit of $7,309,068,211 for this fiscal year it seems to me there no longer is much reason for a difference of opinion as to the general direction in which we are heading financially. If one grants that this estimate is reasonably correct—and the trend of expenditures in the last three months indicates that it is not too large—he must admit, I think, that we are approaching the end of the rope insofar as raising funds for the Government through orthodox channels is concerned.

Just consider what this deficit means in the way of expenditures and the necessity of raising funds. According to the President's budget message, the estimated expenditures for the fiscal year ending next June 30 will be $11,057,176,367, including the sinking fund. The expenditures to date—or through December 28—have been $2,588,000,000. This leaves a balance to be spent in the next six months of nearly $8,500,000,000, or $1,400,000,000 a month. By making the same calculation on estimated receipts and actual income to date, one finds that the Government is expecting to receive in the next six months about $1,750,000,000, or a little under $300,000,000 a month.

Average Deficit Will Be Larger than During the War.

This gives a difference between expenditures and receipts for the next six months of about 6¾ billion dollars. This means an average monthly deficit of a little over $1,100,000,000. During the War, or between March 31, 1917 and August 31, 1919, when the war debt was at its peak, the average monthly increase of the debt was about $835,000,000, or $265,000,000 a month less.

Now, the question is how this $1,100,000,000 a month is to be obtained. Presumably it is to be by Government borrowing. It is far from certain, however, that the Treasury can sell this volume of obligations to private and institutional investors in this country. Had the Administration followed reasonably sound financial principles in the last eight months, there perhaps would have been little question about its ability to do so. It has refused to do this, however, and instead has selected to repudiate the Government's contract on its bonds, tinker with our currency, and in general follow a course that has materially undermined the willingness of investors to continue to lend it money for any considerable period.

It is quite probable, therefore, it seems to me, that before long the Government will have to turn to some source other than private and institutional investors for funds with which to meet the deficit. In general, there are three such sources.

Simplest Way is Just to Start the Printing Presses.

The first of these is for the Government simply to start the printing presses and grind out the currency.

The second is for it to sell its obligations directly to the Federal Reserve Banks and let them grind out the currency. This was the policy followed by the German government during the great inflation in that country.

The third is for it to confiscate the profit on gold resulting from a devaluation of the dollar and then issue currency against this. Such a policy would give us what in effect would be "greenbacks," but they could be called "gold-certificates." For all practical purposes their issue would involve the same basic danger as "greenbacks," but for a while at least it is probable the public would be fooled on just what was going on.

None of these alternatives, it seems to me, can be anticipated except with the gravest concern. Unless the Government puts an end to its incredable rate of spending, however, there is a strong chance that one or the other of them will become inevitable.

London, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Although business was somewhat restricted, the stock exchange registered a good tone today, a number of quotations advancing. Gilt-edged securities, industrials and motor shares improved on investment buying, while Kaffirs, after an early rise, yielded with transatlantic issues on profit taking in the late trading. The market closed steady.

Berlin—Business on the boerse was active and prices improved generally. Reichsbank electric nad potash shares showed the best advances. The market closed slightly unsettled.

Federal Bonds Turn Active; Market Sags

Government Issues Gain; Sales Volume Totals $17,259,000.

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—The Government's long-term, listed securities were heavy and unusually active in today's bond market, following publication of the budget message presented to Congress by President Roosevelt.

While most of the Federal issues rallied in late trading, after some large blocks had changed hands, the majority closed moderately under their quotations of the previous session.

Transactions in the Government section amounted to some $7,200,000, against $1,600,000 yesterday. Final net gains ranged from two thirty-seconds to seven thirty-seconds of a point and losses from one thirty-second to eight thirty-seconds.

Other Loans Irregular.

Corporation loans, as a whole, were mildly irregular, with principal recessions being recorded by so-called, high-grade issues. The average for 60 domestic corporate maturities declined .1 of a point. Sales totaled $17,259,000, par value, of which the Federals accounted for the largest proportion.

Traders and investors apparently found interpretation of the new budget somewhat difficult. In some quarters it was felt that the borrowings by the Treasury of some $10,000,000,000 in the next six months might cause a substantial adavnce in interest rates, which would put outstanding Government issues at a disadvantage.

Hurried selling of Treasury 4¼-3¼s and some other longer-term bonds was reported, but selling dried up in the final hour upon the appearance of more sanguine buyers.

Borrowing Plans Hailed.

While the market, as a whole, seemed a little confused regarding details of the huge Government spending program during the remainder of the fiscal year, the fact that the money will be raised by orthodox borrowing was cheering to those financial circles which saw in this feature a virtual renunciation of monetary inflation.

Minor losses and gains were the rule throughout the corporate groups. Various loans of Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Hudson & Manhattan, International Telephone, National Dairy, Postal Telegraph and some others held gains of around a point each. Some bonds of American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Santa Fe, Burlington, Chesapeake & Ohio, Frisco, Southern Pacific, Southern and Union Pacific eased.

There were moderate reactions in German dollar obligations, attributed partly to profit taking after the recent advance of this group. Loans of Cuba, Finland, Belgium and Japan were firm. Some issues of France, Argentina and Australia were a trifle heavy.

Woodstock Overall Plant Is Reopened

Woodstock, Va., Jan. 4 (Spl.). Optimism pervaded Woodstock business circles today as the last of the 70 employes of the Casey Jones Co.'s overall plant here returned to work following reopening of the plant Tuesday.

Closed for more than a month, the reopening of the plant was welcomed by both business men and laborers. It is one of the town's largest industries.

When the plant reopened Tuesday, 49 persons, former employes, were given work. Today the remaining 21 employes were taken on the pay rolls, largely in the finishing department, when a stock of goods had been built up during the last two days.

Curb Is Driven Higher Under Mines Lead

Gold Issues Push Prices to Better Level; Sales, 202,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—A last-hour recovery led by gold-mining shares brought the curb market to an improved plane at the close today.

Forenoon losses were canceled or reduced and metal shares closed fractions to more than a point net higher.

Alcohols showed a few minor recessions on final prices, while a fairly steady tone prevailed among oils. Utilities and industrial specialties were narrowly mixed.

Newmont gained 2½ points and advances of around a point occurred in Lake Shore Mines, Pioneer Gold, and Bunker Hill & Sullivan. In the power group, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore ranged a point higher, while Electric Bond & Share and American Gas & Electric almost canceled fractional dips.

The Standard Oil shares ended steady to slightly improved. Aluminum Co. of America, Hiram Walker, Canadian Industrial Alcohol A and Parker Rust Proof yielded fractionally.

Transfers approximated 202,000 shares, about the same as yesterday.

U. S. Dollar Gains Slightly On Markets

London, Jan. 4 (AP).—After holding well under $5.10 to the pound for the greater part of the day, the United States dollar broke rather sharply in late afternoon dealings, chiefly on selling orders from New York, and closed at $5.14¾.

When the foreign exchange market sales officially ended, the dollar was at $5.09¼, a gain of six cents to the pound from the overnight rate of $5.15¼.

President Roosevelt's omission of reference to inflation was credited with the advance, which crumpled in after-hours trading.

Closing in Paris at 16.37 francs (6.10 cents to the franc), the dollar registered a gain of 32 centimes from yesterday's final quotation of 16.05 francs (6.23 cents).

In Berlin the dollar was quoted at 2.70 marks (37.03 cents to the mark), as compared to yesterday's rate of 2.635 marks (37.95 cents to the mark).

Cotton Gains $1 Per Bale In Late Rally

January Closed at 10.47 as General Market Rises 14 to 23 Points.

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—Overcoming the handicap of early selling which pushed contracts down about 50 cents a bale, cotton rallied in the late trading, to close at gains of more than $1 a bale in some positions.

March, after selling off to 10.30, or 27 points below yesterday's high advanced to 10.59 in the later trading, making new high ground for the movement. That delivery closed at 10.57, with the general market ending firm at net advances of 14 to 23 points.

Following a slightly lower opening, the more active positions sold 11 to 12 points net lower during the early trading under liquidation and scattered selling, promoted by relatively easy Liverpool cables. There was also some selling attributed to reports of a cotton trade agreement between India and Japan. These suggested some possible adverse effects on exports of American cotton during the balance of the season.

Market Steadies.

The market steadied up after the early offerings had been absorbed on trade buying and covering. The latter became more active during the afternoon, in connection with talk of prospects for business expansion following Government expenditures in the recovery and relief programs, while inflationary theories seemed to be strengthened somewhat by the rally in foreign exchange. Active months sold 26 to 30 points up from the low levels of the morning and closed within a few points of the best.

Reports from the Southwest said a little more cotton came out from the interior on yesterday's early advance, but offerings dried up following the decline in futures and the basis was reported very firm with the demand active.

Exports today 35,344, making 4,253,752 so far this season. Port receipts 37,068. U. S. port stocks 4,114,910.

Workers' Stock Purchase Plan Faces Revision

Plans for use of employe stock distribution in industrial plants may be headed for extinction, according to Edward S. Cowdrick in the January Nation's Business.

This method of encouraging thrift became very popular during the years preceding 1929. Thousands of workers discovered afterward that their unpaid installments amounted to a great deal more than the value of the stock.

Naturally this plan for employe stock ownership fell into great disfavor. Some observers believe that it was always unwise and that it is not likely to make a comeback.

This leaves a problem to be figured out in behalf of that large majority of workers who should not buy the stocks of the plants for which they are working, according to Mr. Cowdrick. Proof that workers need a financial cushion against loss of their earning power has been shown by experience in the past four years.

According to the Nation's Business, among a fairly wide range of possibilities, favorable consideration is being given to investment trusts, saving bank plans, credit unions, life and disability insurance, mutual benefit associations, contributory pensions and unemployment funds.

Auto Products Exports Drop To $7,717,147

Decline in Foreign Sales Laid to Less Demand for Small Units.

Exports of automotive products from the United States during November were valued at $7,717,147, compared with $8,991,948 for October and $4,782,309 for November, 1932, according to a report prepared by P. R. Mattix, of the Commerce Department's automotive-aeronautics-trade division.

The slight decrease from the October valuation, the report points out, reflected the usual seasonal tendency in view of suspended activities on the part of domestic manufacturers incident to the announcement of new models.

Passenger car shipments for November numbered 3,438 units valued at $2,014,458, a decrease of 2,384, or 40 per cent, in number and $942,946, or 31 per cent, in value, compared with the preceding month, but were higher by 102 per cent in number and 118 per cent in value than for November, 1932, when shipments in this classification totaled 1,701 units valued at $906,251.

Low-Price Units Demand.

The reduced demand for low-priced units "not over $850," accounted for the major portion of the decline from October, with 3,159 units valued at $1,675,255, against 5,516 valued at $2,558,530. In only one class, "over $850, not over $1,200," did the November shipments of passenger cars register an increase over October, totaling 199 units valued at $186,613 against 162 units valued at $157,752.

The Union of South Africa retained the position of leading market for American passenger cars during November, although purchases from this market were nearly 50 per cent below the requirements for October.

The Netherlands, Australia and the Philippine Islands were the next most important countries of destination for passenger cars, with Belgium dropping to fifth place.

Australia and Islands.

Australia and the Philippine Islands advanced from fourteenth and thirteenth place, respectively, which they occupied in October through substantial increases in their demands. Uruguay, China, Iraq, Morocco and Switzerland each had improved totals in November.

Exports of trucks decreased from 5,541 units valued at $2,762,636 for October to 3,159 valued at $1,870,003 for November, a decline of 43 per cent in number and 28 per cent in value. The totals for the current month, however, registered gains of 135 per cent in number and 139 per cent in value over November, 1932, when 1,341 units valued at $782,431 were sold abroad.

In the truck field, Australia was the chief purchasing outlet replacing Japan which dropped to third place. Spain ranked second with the Netherlands as the fourth most important market, having more than doubled its October requirements.

Decrease in Shipments.

Decreased shipments in the lower priced categories both of passenger cars and trucks is evident from the average export value for the month which increased to $585 and $591, respectively, compared with $509 and $498 for October.

The demand for miscellaneous automotive products continued to improve and exports were valued at $3,832,656, a gain of $650,850, or 24 per cent, over the October figure, and $829,029, or 27 per cent, above the total for this group during November, 1932.

United States shipments of all automotive products for the 11 months ended November, 1933, were valued at $84,334,233, an increase of $7,657,241, or approximately 10 per cent, compared with the corresponding period of last year. The January-November total exceeds the valuation for the complete year of 1932 amounting to $82,185,100, and has been attained by a steady export volume throughout the 11-month period, rather than by a fluctuating demand that showed a wide variance month by month.

British Reduce Import Duties On Dyestuffs

Treasury orders, effective from December 27, provide duty-free admission into the United Kingdom of synthetic organic dyestuffs when imported under a board of trade license, and increase from 10 per cent to 20 per cent ad valorem the duty on pigments which are synthetic organic colors and coloring matters, according to a cablegram received in the Department of Commerce from Commercial Attache Lynn W. Meeking, London.

Effective from the same date, the Board of Trade is issuing open general licenses permitting the importation of compound preparations and articles not suitable for use in dyeing, manufactured from synthetic organic dyestuffs, including pigment dyestuffs whether soluble or insoluble.

Walt Mason, Himself

Law's Delays.

Jim Jinx is slain by Bildad Blain, for which there's no excuse; and people say, "Ah, well-a-day, the law will cook his goose. Such sinful sports must face the courts, where justice does prevail, and then they'll see the gallows-tree, or spend their lives in jail." When Blain is tried he's not denied all chances he may wish; the lawyers swarm around his form, and platitudes they dish. For weeks and weeks the legal freaks keep up their loud harangue, and all in vain, for Bildad Blain is told that he must hang. Then people say, "Hurroo! Hurray! Our justice is the stuff, and he's insane who would maintain that it's an empty bluff." But Blain appeals, and doubtless feels the game is but begun; from court to court he'll blithely sport, with lawyers by the ton. The case is heard by some wise bird who sits upon a bench, who hears appeals, and in the wheels he throws a monkey wrench. "This Bildad Blain, his guilt is plain, but some brash legal stout who wrote the writ by which he's hit, has left a comma out. And so it's plain that Bildad Blain must now be tried once more;" this is the fruit of mind astute, of deep judicial lore. He's tried four times for all his crimes, by judges pure and chaste, and beats the laws four times because a hyphen was misplaced.

Japan to Crown Puppet State's Ruler March 1

Work Rushes on Pu-Yi's Palace in Capital of Manchukuo.

Hsinching, Manchukuo, (Friday), Jan. 5 (AP).—Henry Pu-Yi will become emperor of 2-year-old Manchukuo March 1, reliable reports said today, amid the splendor he knew as China's "boy emperor."

Elevation from position as civilian executive of Manchukuo, under Japanese sponsorship, will follow promulgation of a new constitution like Japan's and a new protocol expected to guarantee his sovereignty and proclain Japan's right to defend the state.

It is expected that the 28-year-old "last of the Manchus" will grant amnesty to political and other prisoners.

Foreigners here suggest that Pu-Yi will call himself "Henry I," but the Manchus believe he will assume the name of the old Chinese dynasty, Hsuan Tung, under which he occupied the dragon throne.

Work is being rushed on Pu-Yi's million-dollar palace in the new city of Hsinching for the rehabilitated monarch and his 23-year-old consort, former Princess Kuo Chi Si.

There appears to be a difference of opinion as to wether it would be wise to attempt to extend Pu-Yi's rule to North China, or confine his authority with the hope of later obtaining adherence of Manchu princes in inner and outer Mongolia, and eventually a portion of China.

Texas Seeks Cleveland Man for Killing Woman

Mrs. Deibolt's nude body was found on the desert near Van Horn, Tex., November 7, 1933. Wilson is at large.

Rolph Saves Convicted Slayer From Gallows

ARTHUR GODFREY, president of WMAL's Breakfast Club, ought to be out early this morning looking for a job.

N. B. C. bosses accepted his resignation yesterday.

There are those who put Godfrey's separation from N. B. C. in another light, but our own idea is that he got tired of asking the minds for more of what it takes to keep the home fires burning. Godfrey started the Breakfast Club last March. Some 13,000 listeners joined, making Godfrey feel he was worth more to the minds than when he first went to work for them about two years ago.

WHERE Senator William King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, said "no," Representative Mary Norton, chairman of the House Committee, said "yes," and, inasmuch as the groups are meeting jointly at the invitation of the House, hearings on the District of Columbia liquor bill will be aired by WJSV today and tomorrow.

Today's proceedings have been spotted in 15-minute doses along WJSV's schedule from 10 a. m. to adjournment. All regular morning shows after 10 o'clock have been canceled to permit complete broadcasting of the hearing tomorrow.

WABC, at Philadelphia, may be found at 860, if any one would just as soon listen to Helen and Mary.

WRC—Pilot Ruth Nichols discusses aviation for women, Joseph Littau's concert orchestra provides musical interlude, 3:30 p. m.; A Shakespeare cycle including "Who Is Sylvia?" and "Hark, Hark the Lark," by Schubert and Scherzo and Nocturne from Mendelsshon's "Midsummer Night's Dream," to be sung by Jessica Dragonette, 8 p. m.; Lee Wiley offers "Love Me," "Sittin' Up Waitin' for You" and "Did You Ever See a Dream Walking?" 9:30 p. m.

WJSV—Liquor control hearing, 10, 10:30, 11:30 a. m. and 12:15 p. m.; Philadelphia orchestra, Brahms' Symphony No. 1 in C minor, the Liebesnacht music from Wagner's "Tristan und Isolde" and Strauss' "Tod und Verklarung."

Fred Waring's erstwhile meal ticket has gone out and built himself a brand new show with Ted Fiorito, bandman-composer, the nucleus.

Columbia, auditioned long and often, called in a listening board of men and women in and out of the industry, heard Ted Lewis, Buddy Rogers, Charles Previn and Phil Spitalny before the customer accepted Fiorito.

Born in Newark, N. J., Fiorito became a name among popular music makers in Chicago before his present connection with a San Francisco hotel. He is credited with authorship of "No, No, Nora," "Charley, My Boy," "Now That You've Gone," "Hanging on the Garden Gate," "Laugh, Clown, Laugh" and "King for a Day."

Fred Waring's new association is said to be costing one automobile manufacturer $10,000 a week.

Nothing very much was done about it in the morning and afternoon, but when a cable at Fourteetnh and K streets northwest burned out about 11:15 at night with Anthony Frome, Baltimore's Poet Prince, ready to broadcast to the network, all hands were pretty frantic until some one remembered that WRC Announcer Bill Coyle played a respectable piano.

So Coyle stepped quietly into a studio, engineers switched the WMAL transmitter onto WRC and Bill became a network broadcaster for three minutes.

"Non so piu cosa son" (I Know Not What I Am Doing), the tender love song of the adolescent Cherubino in the first act of Mozart's opera, "The Marriage of Figaro," will be Soprano Mary Eastman's leading offering as she ends her radio vacation tonight at 10:45 on C. B. S.

The ovation to President Roosevelt when he entered the House to deliver his State of the Union message all but blasted the microphone. Engineers quickly cut down the current to protect instruments and stay on the air. N. B. C. used seven ribbon microphones in the House, sent the broadcast to 80 stations, short-waved it abroad from Pittsburgh, Bound Brook and Schenectady.

March of Time tonight can be expected to produce a version of the Congress opening. Also timeworthy was the christening of the first-born son of Emperor Hirohito of Japan, Joseph Stalin's announcement of a new five-year plan and Adolf Hitler's reception of a long-lost war comrade.

Pancho and his orchestra, exponents of tango and rhumba at New York's Ambassador Hotel, begin a series on Columbia today at 5 p. m. The band also will be heard Tuesday at 12:30 a. m., beginning next week.

Sponsors of March of Time have renewed their contract with C. B. S. • • • January 12 was the expiration date • • • Time's news dramas require the services of some 75 actors and impersonators • • • the New York Philharmonic is broadcasting a program of French music throughout the United States and France from Carnegie Hall Saturday, January 13 • • • two New York school children, Edith Zelda, 12, and Arnold Pomerantz, 11, have been assigned piano solos in Saint-Saens' "The Carnival of the Animals." • • • C. B. S. has announced the impending return to broadcasting of Mexican Tenor Tito Guizar • • • Washington listeners probably will have to tune Philadelphia or New York to hear him • • • Bandman Gus Arnheim, one-time Abe Lyman pianist, has been added to the Bing Crosby show set-up.

'Blue Devils' Rescue Snowbound Yankees

Nice, France, Jan. 4 (AP).—French Alpine Chasseurs, the famous "Blue Devils" of the World War, were pressed into service today to rescue more than 200 tourists, including some Americans, stranded by a snowfall at Beuil, a tiny winter sports resort in the mountains 50 miles northwest of Nice.

The tourist party doubled the normal population of the village and a food shortage resulted. The soldiers carried in provisions and brought out 40 tourists. They expect to rescue the rest tomorrow.
